Molotoff and Hitler Reach Agreement at Conference

Every Important Question Settled, But Berlin Keeps Answers a Secret

What Each Nation Will Have under New Order for Asia, Europe and Africa Decided Upon

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

BERLIN, Nov. 14 (AP)—Vyacheslaff Molotoff and Adolf Hitler have fixed Soviet Russia's sphere of interest in the authoritarian new order for Europe, Africa and Asia, sources usually in the know asserted tonight after the Russian's departure for home.

Officially, the Hitler-Molotoff talks led to "mutual accord on all important questions of interest to Germany and the U.S.S.R." but neither the questions nor the decisions were listed.

Unofficial but reliable sources left no doubt they were firmly convinced Russia is ranging herself on the side of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis.

In general terms, they added, the Russian "grossraum"—or vast area of domination—lies between Japan's far-eastern zone of dominance and Europe and Africa, which the Rome-Berlin axis has allotted to itself.

Business "Give and Take"

Two days of talks in Berlin, including long hours with Fuehrer Hitler, sufficed to bring agreement on what reliable informants said was a basis of "strictly business give-and-take."

Meanwhile, a speech by the Fuehrer himself pictured Germany in the post-war role of a model "socialistic state." It is this 'socialistic state,' he told munitions workers and army labor groups, which is fighting "a plutocratic, capitalistic England."

Molotoff, Soviet premier and foreign commissar, No. 1 colloborator of Joseph Stalin, took the train for Moscow with his large retinue at 11 a. m. (4 a. m., EST). A commu-

FROZEN TO DEATH IN GREAT LAKES BLIZZARD

Two hunters who perished in the worst storm to sweep the Great Lakes region in many years are pictured as they were found on a small island in northern Minnesota, where they were marooned by the blizzard. They are Melville H. Roberts, 42, and Carl O. Iverson, 41, both of St. Paul. Coast Guard rescue workers expressed fear that at least 65 hunters and seamen had been similarly killed.

American Vessels Patrol Caribbean; Release British

U. S. Warships Hold Station Off Station at Fort De France

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Nov. 14 (AP)—Warships of the U. S. neutrality patrol have taken over from the British West Indies squadron their mission of patrolling French possessions in the Caribbean, travelers from French-owned Martinique disclosed today.

Several U. S. destroyers have held a station off the harbor entrance of Fort de France, Martinique, for more than a week, since British cruisers and destroyers withdrew.

The government of Martinique yesterday announced "consolidation of good relations" with the United States following the recent visit of U. S. Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade to Fort de France.

Observers arriving here today said that of several French naval vessels at Fort de France, only the training cruiser Jeanne D'Arc appeared to have steam up and gun covers off. The French aircraft carrier Bearn was anchored under the guns of Fort Luis, while a cruiser, two destroyers and smaller naval craft were at the quay-side.

Other vessels of the Atlantic neutrality patrol have recently been observed in this part of the Caribbean.

British Fliers Describe Victory over 3 Warships

Navy Airmen Tell How They Blasted Part of Italian Fleet

By LARRY ALLEN

ABOARD A BATTLESHIP of the BRITISH MEDITERRANEAN FLEET OFF TARANTO, ITALY, Nov. 14 (AP)—British navy airmen did their best to blast Mussolini's warfleet out of the Mediterranean Monday night, when they said, they torpedoed at almost point-blank range three of his crack battleships in the heart of the heavily-mined harbor of Taranto and badly damaged two cruisers and two fleet auxiliaries.

Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, whose fleet boasts that it has chased the Italian warships into harbor every time they have come into contact, decided to "blast them out if they won't come out' and sent a squadron of ace navy torpedo-bombers into the favorite retreat of Italian sailors.

They reported they had left marks on Il Duce's seapower which it will be difficult to heal.

Shoot Many Torpedoes

Shooting tons of aerial torpedoes into the sides and decks of the enemy warcraft anchored in the smooth harbor and lighted by a bright moon, the fliers said, they left the 35,000-ton battleship Littorio a sheet of flame, and two smaller battleships blazing fiercely. The Littorio was the pride of the Italian navy and claimed by it to be the fastest warship in the world.

First reports from fliers returning from reconnaissance said they saw another battleship of the 23,622-ton Conte Di Cavour class "half under water" and another being beached to prevent sinking, the Littorio still burning furiously, and two cruisers and two auxiliary vessels listing badly and apparently in sinking condition.

(The Italian high command, describing British admiralty communiques as "fantastic," admitted but one warship had been damaged.)

Besides, incendiary bombs left a streak of destruction through the dockyards, and set fire to the suspension bridge which connects the inner and outer harbors.

The raiders, who swooped from the decks of the aircraft carrier Illustrious and dived into the inner harbor with their torpedoes and bombs, said the Italians were caught off guard by the violent attack. Only feeble resistance was offered to the sudden onslaught, they said.

Surprise Merchant Ships

While these fliers were striking Mussolini's biggest concentration of naval power with their high explosives, light British naval units swung up toward Brindisi, around the heel of the Italian boot, and surprised three Italian merchant ships carrying supplies to the Fascist army in Albania.

The officers on this sea raid said their shells sent one ship to the bottom and turned the other two into a mass of flames.

(A British communique yesterday said a fourth ship probably was damaged, and hit two escorting destroyers escaped, one of them damaged also.)

Simultaneously, western Mediterranean fleet units plastered Naples and the naval base of Cagliari in

Dog Meat Is Made Legal in Germany

BERLIN, Nov. 14 (AP) — The meat of dogs was legalized for human consumption today for greater Germany, effective Jan. 1, 1941.

Inspection of dog meat will be made under provision of a new law effective on that date when that commodity is to be controlled in the same manner as meat from cattle, hogs, goats, horses and other domestic animals.

Horse meat now is available in some restaurants and is served without the customer having to surrender his precious meat points, demanded for beef, pork and other meats.

Unlicensed and unclaimed mongrels presumably will furnish an additional supply of low-cost meat, although many better canines are trained for military service with the armed forces.

"Amos" Sued for Divorce On Grounds Of Mental Cruelty

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 14, (AP) — Suit for divorce was filed today by Mrs. Leta Gosden against Freeman Gosden, the "Amos" of radio's "Amos and Andy" team. She charged mental cruelty. The Gosdens have been married thirteen years and have two children.

Mrs. Gosden issued a statement that she and her husband had tried faithfully to make their married life happy and successful "but have finally reached the conclusion that this is no longer possible."

Amos and Andy this week are doing their 3,500th radio broadcast. They write as well as act the script.

The couple entered into a property settlement out of court and agreed to terms of custody of the children, Freeman, Jr., 12, and Virginia Marie, 10.

Md. Legislative Council Meets in Mystery Session

Newsmen Barred; Retail Installment Selling Discussed

DR. H. C. BYRD GIVES HIS VIEWS TO MEMBERS

May Have Asked Removal of Forestry Department to Baltimore

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 14 (AP)—The legislative council went into executive session today with Dr. H. C. Byrd, University of Maryland president, presumably to discuss University affairs.

Newspapermen were excluded from the session, which lasted for more than a half-hour. Matters discussed were not disclosed, but legislators indicated that Dr. Byrd may have reviewed his proposal to move the forestry department from Baltimore to College Park.

Council members spent the majority of the day on a discussion of retail instalment selling, adjourning at 5:45 p. m. until next Tuesday.

The council went on record as favoring legislation prohibiting the sale of fireworks in Maryland; the repeal of the declaration of intentions act and revision of laws dealing with the filing of petitions for referenda.

Against Sale of Fireworks

The council approved its subcommittee's report and bill designed to prohibit the sale of fireworks and will recommend passage of the measure when the General Assembly meets.

The fireworks bill, however, is expected to run into legislative opposition. At a council meeting Oct. 23, opponents of the measure did not appear prepared to debate the bill and the council voted against giving them another hearing.

The opponents, who favor a regulatory fireworks bill, however, will be given a chance to present their views to the legisuature.

Attorney General William W. Walsh recommended the repeal of the declarations of intentions act, which requires a person moving into Maryland to declare his intention of becoming a citizen a year before he is entitled to vote.

Walsh also favored changes in the law regarding the filing of nominating petitions to facilitate the detection of fraud. The council adopted his recommendation which calls for signers to give their names, addresses and precinct, district or ward; that the names should be printed or typed below the signatures and that the signatures be published in a newspaper.

The council went a step further and recommended that petitions for referenda should meet all these requirements excepting the one requiring publication.

Curb on Time Payments

At the retail instalment selling hearing, the majority speakjng were in favor of the state regulating the business to wipe out abuses. Instalment selling in Maryland now is virtually unregulated.

The abuses, it was pointed out, are mainly one-sided contract provisions favoring the seller; inadequate statement of the finance and insur-

Italians, British In Great Battle In Mediterranean

ALEXANDRIA BOMBED AND CRUISER IS HIT

Mussolini Said To Plan Gigantic Offensive against Greeks

By The Associated Press

ROME, Nov. 14—With bomb, torpedo and naval gun Britain and Italy appeared tonight finally to have come to grips for the Mediterranean showdown. Each is seeking to deliver devastating blows at the other's bases.

The Italian high command said the British air force struck again Wednesday night at Taranto, key naval base on the gulf that forms an "instep" to the Italian boot, where the British said they disabled or probably damaged half of the Italian battleship strength two nights before.

Fascist fighter planes gave chase in the moonlight, Italians said, and probably shot down two of the raiders.

Fifteen persons, including soldiers, were killed and injured, the high command said, but it declared the only damage was to dwellings. Bombs dropped on the port of Crotone, across the gulf from Taranto, fell in the sea, it added.

Attack British Base

In return, a communique said, the Italians made another thrust at Britain's Alexandria base in Egypt and one formation succeeded in bombing a cruiser.

Using the same weapons, aerial torpedoes, which the British were reported to have used in their first attack on Taranto, the Italians sunk one steamer and damaged another in a convoy in the eastern Mediterranean, the communique added.

Britain's claims of three battleships and four other warships crippled or probably damaged in the Taranto raid were called "fantastic" and "alterations of the truth" by the high command, which promised a communique soon "on the whole naval warfare and air and naval situation in the Mediterranean."

Plan Offensive in Greece

With the Italians claiming to hold their positions near the coast and in the Koritza sector on the Greek front, Giovannia Ansaldo, an authoritative editorial writer, broadcast that a big offensive in Greece could be expected as soon as the new Italian commander there, Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, makes a survey of the fighting zones.

Two Divisions Slain in Mountains, Athens Says In Late Radio Broadcast

Defenders Now Taking Offensive Along Entire Front; 11 Italian Warplanes Shot Down and 10 Others Are Damaged Beyond Repair; 200 Prisoners Taken in Latest Battle

ATHENS, Nov. 15 (Friday) (AP) — The Athens radio announced early today an Italian army corps of two divisions had been annihilated in the Pindus mountains rather than the one division as previously reported. Two divisions normally have a complement of 30,000 men.

The radio announced that in addition to the Fascist division which penetrated Greek territory, another division which attempted to come to its aid was wiped out.

The Greek army now is taking the initiative along the entire front, the announcement added.

A high command communique declared eleven Italian warplanes were shot down during the day and that another ten planes "probably have been damaged beyond repair."

Taking the initiative in the air as well as on the ground, the high command said its planes bombed the Italian invasion base at Koritza, ten miles inside Albania, and that planes on the ground were destroyed.

200 Prisoners Taken

More than 200 prisoners and war materials "of all descriptions" were reported seized.

Greek planes were said to have swept low over marching Italian columns, scattering them.

The high command charged that Italian planes "indiscriminately bombed" a number of interior Greek towns, inflicting civilian casualties, including some dead, and demolishing a number of buildings. Hospitals also were reported hit.

In all the day's widespread operations, the Greeks said they lost only one plane.

Fascist troop reinforcements were reported hurrying today from the Yugoslav frontier to southern Albania in an effort to halt Greek advances in that area which military experts said were assuming proportions of a counter-invasion.

No Italian Victories

In every Greek account, the Italian war on Greece thus had become a disaster for the invaders on this, the eighteenth day of the campaign.

In the center of the battleline the Greeks were declared in dispatches from the front to have cut out a new salient; to the south—in areas abandoned by the Italian right wing—the defenders were reported to be rapidly mopping up; above Ioannina Greek troops were said to be systematically driving into Albanian territory and imminently threatening the destruction of Italian communications.

Greeks Advancing

In the coastal Epirus sector to the west, which fronts upon the Ionian sea, other Greeks were advancing, and on the northern front a government spokesman reported that the Greeks still held fast to their mountain positions dominating the important Albanian town of Koritza.

By none of these successes, however, were the Greeks cheered so much as by the news that Italian troops had been forced to abandon positions on the Yugoslav frontier to hurry south.

This maneuver suggested to some observers here that continuing British and Greek air attacks on vital Italian naval bases, Taranto in particular, had halted the transport of reinforcements from Italy.

(In Rome today the Italian high command's communique dismissed land operations in Greece with a single paragraph which spoke of "local actions" in Epirus and of a "few enemy attacks" in the region of Koritza, which were declared "completely repulsed."

2,000 Defeat 20,000

A wounded Greek officer Captain Panos Kyriakou, told in a hospital of a mountain campaign which began on Oct. 30 in which, he declared, 2,000 highly mobile Greek troops had started the rout of a force of some 20,000 of Italy's ablest mountaineer soldiers. The rout, he said, was completed a week later, Nov. 6.

Up to 8 o'clock of that night, he

French Protest Mass Expulsions From Lorraine

New Policy of Collaboration Seems Headed for the Rocks

By The Associated Press

VICHY, France, Nov. 14—A rift in the newly formulated French policy of collaboration with Germany developed today when the French government announced it had protested vigorously over the mass expulsion of residents of the German-occupied province of Lorraine.

A communique announcing the protest to the German armistice commission was issued shortly after Vice-Premier Pierre Laval had returned abruptly from his negotiations with German authorities in Paris and reported at a hurriedly summoned cabinet meeting. Laval later returned to Paris.

The meeting was reported also to have considered the situation in North Africa.

Diplomatic circles in Switzerland reported the cabinet acted to stop the spread of De Gaullist "Free French" forces northward from French equatorial Africa as the result of a German-Italian threat that if the Vichy government does not defend the African empire the Axis will be forced to do so.

Vichy Government Uneasy

It was reported French naval units had left their continental bases for African ports. This report followed recent indications that the Vichy government is uneasy over

Stimson Expects To Remain in Cabinet

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP)—Secretary Stimson said in response to a press conference inquiry today that he had no plan to quit the cabinet.

"So far as I know, nobody has thought of making me resign," the war secretary added.

Stimson is one of two Republican members of President Rosevelt's cabinet. Frank Knox, secretary of the navy, being the other.

Hitler Announces Post-War Duty as He Looks upon It

Declares Germany Will Serve World as a Model Socialistic State

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Nov. 14 — Adolf Hitler told behind-the-lines workers today that Germany's greatest post-war duty would be to serve the world as a "model" socialistic state.

He addressed munitions workers and army labor groups while the public was learning the latest reports in the war against British commerce.

The high command announced destruction of eight British merchant ships, five by one submarine and the rest by bombing planes, and severe damage to another vessel.

The submarine sinkings totaled 28,840 tons, the daily communique said but the time and place of the forays were not given.

Hitler declared that it is "a plutocratic, capitalistic England," dominated by "anti-social tendencies," which is waging war against "the German socialistic state."

"This struggle," he said, "is being carried on, not only by German soldiers, who are the best in the world, but also by many mil-

Ambassador William C. Bullitt Is Offered Kennedy's Post in London

Resigns French Post, but May Decide To Remain in United States

By K. C. STARK

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP)—Ambassador William C. Bullitt has been offered the post of envoy to Great Britain to succeed Joseph P. Kennedy, it was reported reliably tonight after he disclosed that he had sought unsuccessfully to leave the government service.

Informed sources said Bullitt still was considering a request that he accept the London assignment but was disinclined to do so for the same reason that he submitted his resignation as ambassador to France.

Bullitt, in a brief statement, said

Labor Board May Be Reorganized Under Dr. Millis

Chicago Educator Slated To Get J. Warren Madden's Post

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP)—The appointment of Dr. Harry Alvin Millis to the National Labor Relations Board, predicted today by reliable informants, is expected to result in a partial reorganization of the agency's personnel and policies.

Millis, 67-year-old Chicago educator and economist, is slated to get the post on the three-man board vacated when Chairman J. Warren Madden's term expired last August.

A former member of the board before it was reconstituted and given greater powers under the Wagner act in 1935, Millis is expected in some quarters to co-operate with Board Member William M. Leiserson's program for changes in staff and precedure.

The third member is Edwin S. Smith who is reported to have voted with Madden on some of the reorganization proposals advanced by Leiserson. Smith's term expires in 1941.

Millis, like Leiserson, is a veteran in the field of arbitration and labor relations, and they are understood

Stimson Orders Badges Worn in War Department

Newspapermen Will Also Be Required To Wear Them, He Says

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP) — Secretary Stimson today ordered officers and civilians employed at the war department here to wear badges bearing identification photographs.

The order, which applies also to newspapermen and others customarily having business at the department although not employes, was described as part of a general precautionary program at army establishments. Similar action, it was indicated, will be taken by the navy and some other government departments.

Other defense developments of the day included an anouncement of award of an $18,529,500 contract for navy airplanes and parts to Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, San Diego, Calif. The number of planes involved and delivery dates were withheld.

It also was anounced that arrangements had been completed for the Douglas Aircraft Company, Santa Monica, Calif., to carry out an $11,254,700 plant expansion through its subsidiary, the Western Land Improvement Company, Long Beach, Calif.

Will Retain Personnel

In connection with the navy's purchase of merchant vessels as auxiliary craft, Secretary Knox said it would be the policy to retain the ships' personnel as far as possible. Officers and men will be allowed to volunteer for one year's service aboard the ship. More than 2,500 merchant officers and seamen already have been affected by the navy's acquisition of merchant ships.

The plan for identification badges was anonunced by Stimson at a press conference at which he also said he had no intention of resigning.

"So far as I know, nobody has thought of making me resign," Stimson added.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (AP) — The Berlin radio said today that Rumanian armed forces would be demobilized beginning tomorrow.

British Continue Drive To Eliminate Italians

Attack Naval Base at Taranto and Set Seven Big Fires

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Nov. 14 — In a new aerial offensive apparently intended to put Italy definitely out of the war as a naval power, the Royal Air Force last night and early today made another attack on the naval base at Taranto, starting at least seven big fires in a rain of high explosives and incendiaries.

While the big bombers were attacking under clear moonlit skies, other British planes, the air ministry said today, bombed Berlin, a thousand miles away to the north.

Attack Italian Strongholds

They struck, too, said the air ministry, at Italian strongholds and outposts from the Libyan desert to Albania—going to work particularly on the Italian ports used as supply bases for the Fascist invasion of Greece.

In the pattern of violence on two continents, these were among the announced results:

In Italy: The docks and harbor of Taranto—hit, the British said, by RAF bombers following the trail of naval planes which on Monday night were declared to have crippled three Italian battleships and four other warships. This new raid was described by an authorized source as "highly successful."

Every British attacker was reported to have returned to base. At the same time, circumstances of Monday night's raid made it appear that the planes of three British aircraft carriers were now in position to strike again and again at Italy.

Berlin Again Attacked

In Germany: Berlin—which had an eminent guest in the Russian premier and foreign minister, Vyacheslaff Molotoff—attacked, and fires started in the night.

Among objectives bombed in the capital, the air ministry said, were the Schleisischer railway station — a familiar target now—and the Grunewald freight yards.

Elsewhere in Reich territory the ministry reported these targets hit again: Cologne power station; factories at Dortmund and Dusseldorf; the important Rhine port area of Duisburg-Ruhrort; coke ovens at Lintfort; oil plants at Gelsenkirchen, Hanover, Leuna; airdromes in various areas and a seaplane base at Norderney; the docks at Calais and Wilhelmshaven.

In this German phase of the campaign, the British acknowledged the loss of two planes.

In Albania and along the desert front; the vital Alabanian port of Durazzo pounded once more in a long series of attacks.

Valona Heavily Bombed

Valona, another Albanian port to the south, bombed heavily; an ammunition dump and motor transport concentrations hit.

Sidi Barrani and Derna in the western desert raided, along with Bardia and Begasi in Italian Libya; more fires started; ships in Bengasi harbor bombed.

As the world prestige of the British navy and air fleets correspondingly rose, it was understood that five new 35,000 ton battleships of thirty knots, of the King George V class, now have gone into service.

If they are in fact in service Britain's total of capital ships stands at nineteen against an Axis capital strength, as figured here, of nine.

To many here, the action at Taranto was the greatest victory for Britain since the defeat of the massed squadrons of German bombers which sought control of British air in the late summer and early autumn.

They suggested that it would have a tremendous diplomatic and propaganda value — heartening the Greeks and Turks, sobering Spain and perhaps Russia, and perhaps even leading to such a decline in Italian morale that quick victories would be needed to head off a possible popular movement against Mussolini.

London Hospitals Bombed by Nazis In Night Attack

Four Heavy Bombs Hit One and Several Are Killed

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Nov. 15 (Friday)—Two London hospitals suffered the heaviest blows loosed upon London last night in a regular Axis nightly air raid which was otherwise comparatively light.

The second one struck was declared simply to have lost "some casualties."

The first was hit by four heavy bombs, one of which smashed down directly upon a wing devoted to the chronically ill. An undetermined number of persons were killed and wounded.

Hit, too, was a suburban department store in which hundreds of shoppers were standing.

Aside from these individual cases there had been no heavy damage here up to early this morning. For the most part the raiders flew high and fled hastily after dropping their bombs. Anti-aircraft fire was intermittent.

A southeast town reported a school, a church and an amusement park damaged and at least one fatality. There one raider crashed in flames; another was shot down by a British Hurricane fighter.

A midlands town was bombed with both heavy explosions and incendiaries and there were a number of casualties in a row of houses smashed flat.

The Nazis apparently are lessening the number of full-powered nightly visits because of the hazards over the channel and south coast routes to London. A powerful force of RAF night-flying fighters is gradually being built up with the actual battleline being pushed nearer the Germans.

Three steps in this campaign were thus unofficially described tonight:

Fighter patrols are regularly taking off in the late afternoon to attack the night raiders as they set out from occupied France.

Spitfires and Hurricane fighters are escorting flights of RAF bombers every suitable day across the ohannel to harass the air fields used by night raiders.

More and more fighter pilots are being trained, like their colleagues of the bomber command, to become expert in night flying.

The ground guns lifted a heavy barrage for a time. It slackened until there was only sporadic firing and then it rose violently again at the same time the reports from the coast had told of big waves of Axis planes heading for London.

No major attacking squadron was able to reach the city in the day and late in the afternoon twenty British Spitfire fighters were declared officially to have "utterly routed" a swarm of forty German Junkers dive bombers, and an escort of Messerschmitt fighters, which sought to attack Dover harbor.

Fifteen Junkers were shot down, the air ministry announced—thirteen of them by a single squadron of twelve Spitfires—while British losses during the entire day were only two planes. Total German losses during the day were put at nineteen.

During the late afternoon, British big guns on the southeast coast heavily bombarded the German artillery emplacements across the channel for an hour.

British Agent Urges U. S. To Enter War; No Appeasement, Knox Says

BOSTON, Nov. 14 (AP)—Commander Thomas D. Galbraith, member of the British purchasing commission, declared tonight that it would be a "glorious and happy day" in British history if this country should decide to take up arms against "the totalitarian nations."

He spoke a few hours after Navy Secretary Frank Knox told an earlier session of the New England conference this country would not "appease anyone on earth," and added, "we are going to give Great Britain every possible degree of aid short of leaving ourselves defenseless."

Knox Praises Fleet

Knox called for "unparalleled unity" in building national defense and in preventing "organized treason" from within. He declared that "we have the strongest fleet today that floats the seven seas. It is not only stronger, but thank God it's ready."

Galbraith told a Rhode Island session of the New England conference in his prepared address tonight that it "isn't true" that "any nation engaged in such a struggle as that in which we are engaged today would not welcome the active assistance of a great and friendly nation."

Asserting that "we don't expect America to come into the war to pull British chestnuts out of the fire," Galbraith added:

"But should America ever decide that the totalitarian nations threaten her trade, her standard of living, the liberty of her people, her independence, the American way of life, and that it is necessary for her to take up arms in the defense of these things, then that indeed would be a glorious and happy day in the annals of British history."

See Test of Endurance

Knox advised the delegates as businessmen that the next five years would "test our endurance as free men in a free country." It would be necessary, he said, "To make sacrifices such as we have never been asked to make before," and added that "profits necessarily will have to become secondary and national security first."

Referring at one point to the "integrity of the British blockade of Europe," the navy secretary declared that "we mustn't be deterred from recognizing its importance by the ghastly conditions that we read about in Europe this winter, black starvation for helpless innocent peoples, the victims of a thoroughly unwarranted war conducted by a fanatic greedy for world domination."

British Bombers Attack Berlin in Waves of Eight

Four Planes Lost and Three Invading Airmen Are Captured

BERLIN, Nov. 15 (Friday) (AP)—Eight or more waves of British bombers attacked Berlin last night and early today and German sources said at least four planes were shot down.

Only eight or ten crossed the downtown area.

One plane was shot down in Berlin and three British airmen who bailed out were captured. The other three were said to have been downed before they reached the city.

The doomed plane over Berlin was clearly visible in the moonlight, amplified by the concentrated beams of searchlights.

The lights and tracer bullets made the city as bright as a carnival midway. Anti-aircraft shell fragments pattered on the roofs and pavements.

Finally the British plane began to lose altitude and two of the crew jumped with parachutes. The plane crashed in flames against a tree.

Half a dozen other British bombers were caught by the searchlights but managed to escape.

Observers who braved the perils of the falling shell fragments and bombs saw several others at a distance, flying toward the city through terrific gunfire.

Between waves of attackers, some occupants of cellar shelters rushed into the streets to gather shell fragments for souvenirs, but patrolmen shouted and herded them back to safety.

Through it all, a lone cyclist was observed, pedalling homeward, apparently oblivious to the metallic clatter and boom all around him.

nique issued son after his departure said:

"During his visit to Berlin on Nov. 12-13, 1940, chairman of the people's council and foreign Minister Molotoff ha dtalks with the fuehere and Reich's Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop.

"An exchange of views was carried out in an atmoshere of mutual trust and led to mutual accord on all imortant questions of interest to Germany and the U.S.S.R."

Von Ribbentro accomanied Molotoff to the Anhalter station.

Molotoff and von Ribbentrop had their final conference of several hours last night after a brilliant reception at the Russian embassy.

British bombing planes disturbed Molotoff's last night in Berlin and the daily communique of the German high command reflected the ferocity of the war at sea between Germany and Britain. It reported destruction of eight British merchant ships, five by one submarine and the others by bombing planes.

An official announcement on the Berlin raid said the British dropped bombs "aimlessly over the outermost suburbs, while strong anti-aircraft defense kept them away from the center of the city.

(The first Moscow comment on Molotoff's Berlin visit came today in Red Star, the army organ, which said the exchange would bring "a strengthening and development of Soviet-German relations in the interest of both countries.")

Complete Agreement Reached

Informed sources, noting the brevity of the Berlin communique on Molotoff's visit, declared nevertheless that it was weighty in that it stated flatly that complete agreement had been reached.

Persons usually in the know left no doubt that they were firmly convinced that Russia was ranging herself on the side of the nations which entered the pact of Berlin Sept. 27—Japan, Italy and Germany.

This may not necessitate actual adherance to that pact, although the wording permits Russia to join. But for the purpose of realistic politics the outstanding fact is that all four powers agree, German sources assert, that the British empire is doomed and the question of heritage arises.

Russia, it is recalled, dreamed for centuries of a southward outlet to world seas. Hence the Axis powers are willing to show their "disinterest" in that section of the world, roughly comprising Iran, Afghanistan and British India, the informants declared.

On the other hand, they said, it may be taken for granted that Russia has agreed not to interfere with Axis claims to Europe and Africa.

Informed sources said Turkey would have to make up her mind definitely on her future place. European Russia and Turkey alone have been excepted from what the Rome-Berlin Axis considers its European sphere.

Whatever compensation Russia may want for her support of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo "new world order" must come from a "bankrupty inventory" of the British empire, German sources said.

the attitude of Gen. Maxime Weygand, its chief in North Africa.)

The communique on the expulsion of Lorraine residents said French-speaking and pro-French people had been given the choice of going to Poland or France and that seven trains daily had been arriving in French territory with the refugees since Nov. 11.

A government spokesman said some of them had been given but a few hours to collect 2,000 francs and a suitcase of clothing before starting.

The communique declared the Germans were telling those expelled that the action was a result of an accord between the French and German governments.

"The government issues a most formal denial of this allegation," said the communique, which added that there never had been any question of the kind discussed.

(Authorized sources in Berlin, recalling that Germans had been withdrawn from Russian-annexed Baltic countries and Bessarabia, said it would not be surprising if French were being displaced in Lorraine by German infiltration, but said they had no official information. "We can't be expected forever to retreat backwards, backwards, backwards, backwards," said one authority.)

This was the first protest the Vichy government has felt it necessary to make since the armistice last June.

ly linked with last month's fire in the munitions building where the department has headquarters. He also minimized the likelihood of sabotage in connection with recent explosions at three separate explosives plants.

The almost simultaneous blasts in the three plants on Tuesday "might have suggested Teutonic efficiency," he told the press conference, but added that preliminary reports failed to show evidence of sabotage at two of the plants.

The FBI, he said, is still investigating an explosion at the Allentown, Pa., plant of the Trojan Powder Company, the only concern of the three with a defense contract.

After the Taranto attack, the British fleet headed back toward its base at Alexandria unmolested even by Italian bombers.

Tonight, officers of the fleet eagerly awaited Admiral Cunningham's next move. Aside from giving Italy's navy its worst blow in history, they believed the attack would have far-reaching effect elsewhere in the Mediterranean.

reported they bombed troops in the Koritza sector and airports near the Greek naval base of Prevesa, Papas on the island of Nikaria north of the Dodecanese, and Argostoli on the island of Cephalonia off the Greek west coast.

Premier Mussolini himself and his foreign minister, Count Ciano, went to the railroad station this morning to welcome Gen. Ion Antonescu, Rumanian chief of state, who arrived presumably to discuss his country's part in the Axis' "new order" in Europe.

A DOZEN MARESCA BROTHERS ON PARADE

The Maresca brothers, twelve strong, make an impressive sight as they march, top-hatted and frock-coated, in a Holy Name parade in Jersey City, N. J. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maresca. Another son, Charles, was killed in the World War. Although Mrs. Maresca hates war, she approves of the draft, for which six of her boys are eligible. Left to right, Anthony, Joseph, Neil, Alfred, James, Frank, Charles (named after the boy buried in France), Michael, Salvatore, John, Thomas and Peter.

Two Americans Jailed in Italy As Law Violators

George Ehret and Grace Gunther Also Heavily Fined

ROME, Nov. 14, (AP) — George Ehret of New York and Miss Grace Gunther, another United States citizen, were convicted today of violating Italy's foreign exchange laws and were sentenced tonight to seven and six years imprisonment respectively.

Ehret was also fined 300,000 lire (about $15,000), and Miss Gunther was ordered to pay a fine of 50,000 lire (about $2,500).

The trial started yesterday and the judges of the special tribunal reached their decision after two hours of deliberation.

The prosecution produced evidence intended to show that Ehret and Miss Gunther collected large sums in dollars from individual Americans and sold them for lire at rates higher than the official exchange.

The prosecution had asked for a nine-year sentence for Ehret and eight years for Miss Gunther as well as their fines.

Their counsel, in a three-hour plea today, argued they were not familiar with the exchange law.

ance terms and the work is regulation of repossession practices.

Rolf Nugent, of New York, representing the Russell Sage Foundation, said social problems were involved in instalment selling. He said foundation studies disclosed that the consumer debt in the past several decades has expanded more than income. Legislation is needed, he said, because under the present credit system the instalment sellers do not "sufficiently put the brakes" on credit extended to customers.

Nugent said both the companies which finance installment selling and the instalment sellers should be licensed. He also recommended that contracts should disclose the "rate of finance charge" and all obligations of the purchaser.

He said he was against rate fixing by legislation.

Eugene E. Heaton, counsel for the Commercial Credit Company, recommended that companies engaged in financing instalment selling be licensed but not actual instalment sellers.

Iceman Gags 'Corny'

America's Handsomest, Movie-Bound, Gives Us the Lowdown

AP Feature Service

CHICAGO — America's handsomest iceman, Ted Barnick of Chicago, is dumping a heavy load from his shoulders. Hollywood's light life, he believes, has possibilities.

Barnick's heading for filmland for a screen test granted after the National Association of Ice Industries crowned him "handsomest." But in case he doesn't make the grade he'll still like the ice business fine.

A cross between sculptor's model and Notre Dame halfback, the Chicagoan wanted to debunk a few stories about an iceman's "easy life" before leaving.

"All those old gags about the iceman and his customers are so rusty they squeak," he reported. "I don't pay any attention to them. they're corny."

A few facts and figures told the rest.

"I grew up in this business, working from 6 in the morning to 4 in the afternoon. A fellow on my route services on an average of about 10,000 pounds a day. And an iceman these days is not just an iceman — he's a service man and a salesman. You gotta sell ice and service or give up."

Barnick's crown, a set of gold-plated ice tongs, is going to Hollywood with him for good luck.

"But if they don't make an actor out of me," the champ confided, "it'll be all right. There's still the ice business."

Petticoat Government Is Doing Very Well

DOVER, N. C., (AP) — Dover's petticoat government is doing very well by the 600 persons in the municipality for "there's really no politics at all."

At least that's what Mayor Annie Dixon Wilson asserts.

Besides her there are three women members of the board of aldermen. There was a man to go with the three women but after two meetings he got disgusted and didn't come back.

One of the alderwomen is treasurer, another is clerk and the other is tax collector. The male member was supposed to be street commissioner. Mayor Wilson has asseumed his duties.

24 Military Bands For New Draft Army

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP) — Plenty of "ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay" for the new draft army was assured when the war department announced plans for organization of twenty-four new military bands and redistribution of others.

Twenty-one of the new bands will be composed of selective service trainees and each will have four regular army instructors. Three new regular army negro bands also are to be organized. All will be of the standard twenty-eight-piece type.

The army also announced that National Youth Administration employment would be increased to take over special duties at army posts now performed by soldiers, in order to give enlisted men more time for military training.

Meanwhile Dr. Clarence A. Dykstra, draft director, served notice on the thousands of mothers, wives and employers who have been writing to him, that selective service headquarters is powerless to grant, or even recommend, deferrment from military service. Asserting that thousands of letters continue to pour in citing reasons for deferments, Dykstra explained in a statement that the classification of a man registered for possible military service is "entirely up to his local board."

Our Economic Future Must Be Considered

THE ECONOMIC PINCH of war has not been felt to any great extent in this country. With the big stimulus provided by the defense construction program it may not be felt for some time yet. But warnings based on knowledge and on bitter experience are being sounded, and they should be heeded. These warnings are directed against the dangers of inflation and against the economic aftermaths inevitable in the use of productive wealth for destructive purposes.

Leon Henderson, chief expert at the job of preventing ourselves from over-inflating ourselves economically, has given the reminder that we must not assume that guns are wealth in an economic sense.

Charles P. Stewart, Washington columnist, recalls that after the San Francisco earthquake and fire, a lot of people were saying, "Well, it's too bad. Nevertheless, San Fran's due for a wonderful period of prosperity, for it will have to be rebuilt and it'll make work for everybody."

Stewart admits that it did have such a period, too, for awhile, during the time the reconstruction was in progress. But he lived in San Francisco a few years later and, he reports, "everything was flatter than a pancake." The reconstruction era was passed and the city was beginning to feel the effects of its previous destruction.

"It stands to reason," argues Stewart, "that a man can't save up his money for half a lifetime, then throw it in the cookstove and burn it up, and figure that then he'll be wonderfully prosperous because he's got to start all over again."

This is something, indeed, to ponder while we are burning up our money on a vast rearmament program. We must all work both toward heading off any specious boom but also toward coping with the grim aftermaths, which we can turn into something sound and stable if we have the foresight and hardihood.

The Frosty Mornings And the Motor Car

TIMELY REMINDER comes to hand from the Keystone Automobile Club, Maryland, that while frost may be all right on pumpkins as a poetical theme frosty mornings can play havoc with motor cars not yet conditioned for cold-weather driving.

In a bulletin just issued, the club gives advice on how to avoid many of the hardships encountered by car owners in freezing temperatures. Five important points are stressed.

"First, make sure the battery is fully charged. Very few motorists know that a battery showing only one-quarter charge will freeze at thirteen degrees above zero. At half-charge, it will freeze at zero, but it is good for ninety-eight below when fully charged.

"Second, it is well to change from heavy to a lighter oil. Even a strong battery will have difficulty in turning over a motor bogged down in heavy oil. Your dealer knows the correct grade for your car.

"Third, make sure the gas line and carburetor are clean.

"Fourth, check the ignition and spark plugs.

"Fifth, use anti-freeze mixture in the radiator. Thirty per cent of denatured alcohol will guard against freezing at two degrees below zero; a like percentage of wood alcohol and glycerine will give protection at five degrees below; fifty per cent of glycerine alone will protect at zero."

As the club says, it is advisable to remember that, even though the car is being kept in shape for cold weather, defects in safety factors will continue to develop and that frequent checking and adjustments are necessary for safe driving.

Much Story Material For Future Movies

THE PICTURE of Baroness Veronica Rothschild and her son upon their arrival from Germany at Miami, which appears on this page, brings to mind the story of the building of the great Rothschild fortune, which gained momentum in the Nineteenth century under the co-operative genius of five sons of the founder, Mayer Anselm Rothschild. The story was big enough on its own to be made into a colossal movie. The Rothschilds distributed money to the various European powers of their time in excess of a hundred million pounds, much of which went to grease the war machines of that period.

An epilogue—or anti-climax to that story—came to attention in the report of the seizure, by the Petain regime, of assorted securities valued at $10,000,000, which Baron Maurice de Rothschild was said to have hidden in a wall of his chateau at Argeles-Gazeat in the Pyrenees. The baron had arrived at his estate shortly before the armistice with several trucks carrying the vaulables—which at the time were assumed to be mere household goods and other personal possessions. But in wartime such interesting moves have a way of getting around to those specially interested.

Thus the baron's cached and other fortunes, together with those of Philippe, Robert and Henri de Rothschild, have been ordered seized by Petain, since their owners were guilty of fleeing the country with their lives.

It seems a little ironic that a family fortune, originally intended to further the wars of its day, should now fall into the martial clutch of a modern day—and in nowise as a loan. But the trend of mounting fortune naturally follows and becomes inextricably involved in the trend of war. This is the story of construction and destruction of wealth through the ages.

By way of bright contrast to the sad end of the French Rothschild fortunes, has come other stories out of New York City where customs officials tell of other fortunes in diamonds which their luckier refugee owners were able to withhold from the long arm of war's lawless.

A typical one is that of a Belgian diamond merchant, Leib Akselrod, who arrived safe at New York with the family fortune of $338,000 in cut diamonds in a shabby briefcase. Incidentally, this lucky refugee family numbered thirteen persons who, presumably, have hereafter to snap their fingers at superstition. Mr. Akselrod's story of his escape "with the jools" was an exciting one, unfolding a dramatic flight from Amsterdam in speeding cars toward the French border under insistent machine-gun fire from low-flying planes.

Customs officials say that the salvaged Akselrod fortune is only one of several—some even larger—diamond fortunes brought into New York by expatriate refugee merchants. Until Hitler's advent there, Antwerp was one of the world's largest centers of diamond exchange.

Doubtless the present war—whenever it may finally come to an end—will be an inexhaustible storehouse of story material for the movies of the future when the world's sense of values will have re-assumed an objective normality and when a seriously moralizing generation will set about building up fortunes against another rainy day of grasping wantonness and waste.

Don't Forget Your Own Personality

NONE TOO FREQUENTLY you come in contact with a person who fairly reeks with personality. He, or she, is unique, individualistic, has certain pleasing mannerisms. In fact, so strong has been the impression made by that personality that you find yourself unconsciously imitating it in some respects.

These personalities with their aura of motivating influence are invariable agreeable, and as invariably considerate of others.

When you come under the beneficent influence of such a person, you should profit by the delightful contact, but not by imitation of mannerism. One should imitate, instead, the predominating qualities of agreeableness and considerateness, but in one's own way.

In other words, you should develop your own personality, your own individuality. That will be a thousand times more satisfactory than in the mere aping of another, in the doing of which you are not yourself.

Fortune Changes Quickly Sometimes

A DISPATCH from New York city relates that in a public auction room the reputed final assets of a $35,000,000 fortune were sold for only $66,500.

The assets were those of Joshua S. Cosden, former Oklahoma all speculator and stock market trader.

Former Wall Street associates of Cosden, who said he was ill in California, said they believed the assets, including life insurance policies and an apartment house lease, was all that was left of Cosden's great fortune.

Changes in fortune come quickly sometimes in America as well as in those countries where the great war machines crush them out. There are two general kinds of treasures one may lay up—material and spiritual. One is evanescent, the other permanent. Perhaps the temporarily unfortunate Cosden has laid up enough of the latter to enable him to carry on, if health will permit. Anyway, it is hoped so.

We should make a greater effort to understand the customs of our Latin American neighbors, urges an editorial. O. K., we're willing. How do we start—by learning the rhumba?

New York is indeed the city in which fame is fleeting. Already, we hear, along Broadway they're asking, "What world's fair?"

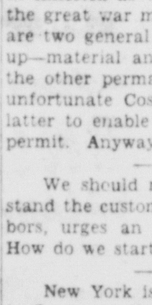

Don't belittle the pre-historic man. Chances are, historians of the distant future will refer to us as the pre-sanity men.

Sailor tells of seeing a fight between a large lobster and a small octopus. It must have been sheer gripping drama.

"What Else Can a Man Do?"

By MARSHALL MASLIN

My friend worries me. . . . I see him seldom because, being in trouble, he keeps away from me. . . . But when I do see him it hurts me. And when he has gone his face haunts me and the old problem comes again. I cannot shut him out of my memory. I do not wish to shut him away. But I can't keep him in mind all the time — and what's a fellow to do?

Marshall Maslin

He has had no job for years. He's looked for one and he has not gone to pieces. He smiles when he tells me his troubles and sometimes he laughs, though there's a note of hysteria in his laughter. And I think he hears it too, and it worries him. . . . I don't know how he has supported his family. We haven't talked about that very much. We can't.

He has his great troubles and I have had troubles of my own—but so much smaller and so trivial compared with his. . . . So you see, when we meet we do not know how to act. . . . In his presence I am ashamed. I have a job and he has none. I have something to fil my days. I have no certain idea as to how he fills his, and the long nights. So when we meet I am uncertain of myself and ashamed. I am not wise enough to take these sad encounters calmly.

But he is wise and kind and he helps me. He is good to me in his simple, natural way. . . . He keeps his self-respect and that is his great achievement. Through these hard years he has preserved his decent pride. By nothing he has ever said, by nothing he does, has he suggested that he has lost his proper respect for the man I know him to be.

He is what he has always been. In the dead of the night, brooding and planning, he may have his moments of self-pity and doubt, but I am sure he pushes them sturdily aside. He is a man and no less a man because evil days have come upon him. He holds his head high.

So, for this I am more grateful than I can tell to him. Some day I shall try to tell him what I think of him, how much I admire him. Some day in a better time we shall speak of these things. And when I do that, I know what he will say. He will look at me wonderingly and say: "But what else was there for me to do?" . . . He is like that.

Mexican Policy Needs an Airing, Gen. Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 — This administration has just recognized the election and government of Gen. Comacho in Mexico. It could not have properly done otherwise. A great many people believe that Gen. Almazari had a majority in the election, but it isn't our business to judge the legality of a Mexican election, although for some time it was not our policy to recognize Latin-American elections, or at least changes of government "achieved through force."

Hugh Johnson

It worked pretty well to decide the incumbency of Mexican presidents, but it did not work to cement good feeling across the border. It didn't fit the president's Good Neighbor policy—which is among his best. It resulted in a lot of secret diplomacy, both here and abroad, the reasons and results of which have never yet been made clear. It also resulted in our engaging in two "undeclared wars" on a neighbor—Funston's expedition at Vera Cruz and Pershing's punitive expedition into Chihuahua. Both were fiascos.

Should Keep Nose Out

I was in the latter as Gen. Pershing's law officer. During our long period of idleness and frustration during that Washington-directed flop, in which we made a great show of mysterious national guard mobilization on the frontier, I was directed by Gen. Pershing, with many facilities to do the job, to make a study of what Mexican government and politics were all about. Coupled with seven years service along the border, including a somewhat similar mobilization by President Taft, during the Madero Revolution, I think I learned a little about Mexico — but frankly, not enough in detail to speak with much confidence.

Boiling it all down to a couple of ultimate results of which I do feel confident, I believe two things —that Mr. Roosevelt is right in keeping our nose out of there and that the Mexican situation is too different from ours and too complex to be judged by any American rule of thumb. It is probably true, as many say, that no Mexican government can live without American support, but it is also true that we cannot condition that support on interference with native institutions.

Back to the Aztecs

Mexicans are largely Indians. Their traditions go back not to thousands of years of Anglo-Saxon traditions, but to an Aztec tradition as old and, in many ways, as well-proved and satisfactory to them. As Indians, they believe in common ownership of property. Not in the Russian sense—not personal property—but in the waters, minerals and even the land.

What is at the bottom of American opposition to the Hull policy today? Because he represents the Indian tradition. American dismay at the election of Comacho is partly because he represents the Indian tradition. Similar motives and misunderstandings were partly responsible for Wilson's two unfortunate forays—Funston's and Pershing's.

Hull's position admitted the right of expropriation of the oil properties, but insisted on compensation. Mexico admitted that duty. The great oil companies with Mexican wells split on the settlement offered. One great group opposed it, and tried to monopolize the negotiation for compensation. It appointed the negotiator, but being dissatisfied with the result, and believing that our givernment could be persuaded to interfere, broke off negotiations. The other group, learning of this, broke the so-called "united-front," sent its own negotiator and arrived at an amicable settlement satisfactory to it.

Needs Thorough Airing

The other groups strategy, which came within a hair of success, introduced a bill in Congress, embargoing Mexican oil. It almost passed. It apparently emanated from sources somewhere in the State department, but it was contrary to Mr. Hull's wishes and might have wrecked Mr. Roosevelt's Good Neighbor policy.

The principal argument for that bill was that we have a domestic pro-ration policy on production purely for conservation, and that importations from Mexico would wreck it. Those importations are very small. Just as was vainly attempted with the NRA oil code, the truth is that both pro-ration and this Mexican incident are not being used for conservation but for price-fixing. How could any foreign importations interfere with American conservation?

From both the angles of foreign and domestic policy this obscure situation needs a thorough airing.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Shunting of Appeal Measure Is Cited As Example of Legislative Weakening

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—This column recently wrote about the disappearance throughout the world of parliamentary government, legislative bodies—such bodies as our own Congress. In country after country the legislative body has disappeared — has been supplanted by one-man, totalitarian government. The Congress of the United States is the only first-rank legislative body remaining in the world—even in England, parliamentary government is now limited.

Mark Sullivan

Describing how—and why—legislative bodies disappear, and are supplanted by totalitarian government, this column wrote:

Many Early Steps

"Wherever this takes place, the final coming of totalitarian government is marked by disappearance of the legislative body, transfer of legislative power to the dictator. But, mark carefully, that this is the final step. The early steps take place long before. And those early steps, often unnoticed, take place within the legislative body itself. The early steps consist of gradual lowering of vitality in the legislative body, gradual neglect of its prerogative, gradual decline of pride on the part of individual members of the legislative body in their governmental function. The death of the legislative body takes place within the body itself; it takes place as the end of a long internal disease. The legislative body is not overtly slain by the dictator. The legislative body commits slow suicide, suicide by a kind of self-generated anemia."

Written as Warning

That was written—and is here repeated—as a warning, a warning to the United States, a warning that here, in our own country, there is a danger of what has happened in other countries. That was written as a plea to the Congress of the United States at this time, as a plea that it do not adjourn, that it remain in session if only for the sake of showing that, in the United States, the legislative body preserves its vitality, preserves its will to live, its will to function.

What has been said so far is in general terms. Let us be concrete. I shall illustrate by a condensed history of one bill—a bill which has been in Congress for two years and six months, which has never been finally acted upon, which is scheduled for final action next week—but which will die if Congress adjourns. This bill is the vivid illustration of the danger to legislative bodies, to our Congress, which lies in mere failure to function.

Plea for Action

What is said here is not a plea that this bill should be passed—not at all. It is solely a plea that the bill be acted upon. It is solely a plea that Congress show it has the vitality to exist and function, by remaining in session, to act upon this and other measures. In order that the question be confined to this single issue—that Congress should function, that it should act upon measures—I shall not give the name of the bill. Let us call it the "X bill".

The X-bill was first brought forward, more than two and a half years ago. During April, 1938, prolonged hearings upon the bill were held by a Senate Judiciary subcommittee.

May 17, 1939, the bill was reported favorably by the Senate Judiciary committee.

July 1939, the bill came up in the Senate. It was passed by the Senate without a dissenting vote.

Opposed by President

Later, New Deal Senators Barkley and Minton asked reconsideration of the vote. It was assumed they spoke for the administration. The administration does not like the X-bill. President Roosevelt, in a press conference, has opposed it.

August 1, 1939, reconsideration was granted by the Senate "upon the understanding that the measure be taken up at some date early in the next session." The quoted words are from Leader Barkley. "Early in the next session" meant early in the present session, about last January or February. But the bill has not yet been acted upon by the Senate.

Meanwhile, April 18, 1940, the House passed the bill by 282 to 97—a practically three to one majority. More than one out of every two Democrats voted for it. Practically all Republicans voted for it. Obviously the bill was popular.

Deferred Repeatedly

In the Senate, consideration of the bill was deferred again and again. Among other pleas, Senator Barkley said that a commission appointed by the attorney general was studying the bill. Finally, under pressure from friends of the bill, Senator Barkley agreed that the bill should be called up November 18 (next week) and that he would cooperate in bringing about final action.

That is the legislative situation today. Undoubtedly Senator Barkley will live up to his promise to bring the bill up for action November 18. But, if Congress adjourns, the bill will be dead. The bill will have died through sheer lack of the will to function on the part of Congress.

The actual name of the "X-bill" is Walter-Logan bill. Its purpose, briefly, is to provide judicial appeal for actions and orders of the executive branch of the government.

How To Choose A Hobby

By Ray Giles in Forbes Magazine

"Make yourselves nests of pleasant thoughts," counselled Ruskin.

That is the first rule and guiding principle in choosing a hobby. If your hobby doesn't provide a genuine refuge and escape to which you can return regularly with a sigh of relief, you haven't got a hobby at all.

The commonest mistake in choosing a hobby is to take up this or that pastime merely because some friend enjoys it. It's better to browse around before making your decision. One clue to wise selection calls for the backward look. "What did I enjoy doing most as a boy?" That question may best reveal what your natural inclinations were before you had to begin compromising with the world and its ways.

A famous psychiatrist declares an even better question is, "What would I do if I were financially independent?" He says that many of us fail to take up certain hobbies because of the expense, but that usually there is a satisfactory way to adapt the luxury hobby to a small income.

Every beginning hobbyist should ask himself, "Does my choice provide enjoyment the year round?" If you can fish only during certain months, either tie flies during the off months or get yourself one or two supplementary hobbies to fill in the blanks when fishing isn't possible. And the ability to practice your pastime during odd moments of any day is priceless. An accountant tells me he took up photography partly because he could slip in a few minutes of it now and then during his lunch hour, thus refreshing his figure-clouded mind for the afternoon. An importer often sketches during lunch hours in a park near his office.

Finally, before deciding on your pet hobby, give it the long view. Will it still be enjoyable 20 years from now? That means, usually, meeting two tests: It must be practicable to a more sedentary you, who possibly will have a smaller income.

Yes; hobby-choosing is a science. No matter what lies ahead, the right hobby will be a nest of pleasant thoughts where all the disagreeable things of life can be forgotten.

Pooled Clothing Is Not Good Here, Edwin Hill Says

By EDWIN C. HILL

Throughout history, feminine adornment has stimulated wars and vice versa. Addressing the convention of the New York State Hairdressers' and Cosmetologists' Association at New York, Miss Gail Aronton says women will spend 300 per cent more on beautifying themselves next year than they are spending this year. With 800,000 young men in the army, she says, "the competition for men will be something fierce." And she added, "Fundamentally, it's all a very primitive business. All you need in this industry is a gang leader, and for the past few years the Duchess of Windsor has been ours."

Edwin C. Hill

We saw an up-state editorial rather tut-tutting Miss Aronton and deploring the spending of so much of our national income on such frivolous concerns, considering the battleships and guns we might buy with the money. The annual outlay on cosmetics is impressive, in terms of attainable fighting tools, but I have an idea that it will be a long time before women turn from face powder to gun-powder, or beat their lipsticks into bayonets. And for many reasons, this appears to me to be as it should be.

An Untidy World

Take it all in all, it's a pretty sleazy, draggle-tail old world. It's tired and untidy and most of it is in hell's own hole. Dark powers now in the ascendant are the enemies of life and of beauty. Vienna's Ringstrasse is the promenade of ghosts. Haunted, too, are the Rue de la Paix and Mayfair, where once "She walked in beauty like the night of cloudless climes and starry skies."

Surely as ugliness and hatred engulf the world no one can scold our girls for making the best of what God gave them. The evocation of feminine beauty and allurement might well be a challenge, an assertion of life and its grace and its triumph against all that so cruelly assails it. There is, I believe, still another reason why our girls should be encouraged, rather than restrained in stepping up their personal charm.

The Dictators' Idea

The first thing a dictator does is to try slam all the women back into the kitchen; to rig them in some kind of awful lindsey-woolsey uniforms; to condemn them for life to shiny noses and stringy hair. The idea is, of course, that women aren't people, and have no individuality—above all, the latter.

The point of our success in styling and beauty culture has been individuation. "It suits your type," is the cliche of the salesrooms. A girl likes to think that her gown, her coiffure, her quite possibly synthetic complexion accentuate something that is uniquely her own; that she is bringing through some distinction of mind or person which sets her apart from every girl in the world. Beauty is more than skin deep. Personality can add cubits to its stature. As our friend Hymie Augen might say, that's how it is in a democracy. There is endless experiment, variation and enhancement of inner as well as outer qualities in the art of beautification.

All Cosmetics Banned

Soviet Russia, with but little perspicacity, it would seem, banished powder and lipstick and all cosmetics from the realm. Not even the Ogpu could prevent the women from grabbing any artifice of adornment, any frippery of dress that slipped into their bleak country, by chance or design. Fascist Italy started out with a stern edict against cosmetics, and enjoined sober conformities in women's dress, but these restraints were forgotten almost as soon as they were imposed. Adolf Hitler is a more efficient boss than the others and came nearer making it stick, but even in wartime there are reports that German women are in furtive but persistent rebellion against his drab and unadorned feminine cosmos.

In the totalitarian scheme, there is no limit to the rule of conformity. In a free world there is no limit to diversity within the bounds of the common public welfare. You can't pool a people's ideas without pooling their clothes. It distresses me not in the least that our lipstick legion is keeping its chin up. It is on the side of the angels.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Authority Shift Danger Is Seen

Checks and Balances Must Be Preserved, Myersdale Reader Declares

Editor, The Cumberland News:

Since ours is a government of checks and balances, these should be preserved at all costs. There should be a federal law preventing the transfer of power and authority from one branch to another with strict penalties for asking for or accepting same.

The Legislature should be required by law to function with equal speed, sagacity and efficiency of the executive branch so as to avoid delays and prevent the need for transfer of power and authority to the executive branch of the government.

Federal bond issues should require the majority vote of individuals and corporations paying fifty or more dollars federal tax.

This would preserve the nation from threat of bankruptcy and prevent unrestrained lavishness in spending money of the nation's taxpayers.

THE DAILY STORY

UNCROWNED KING

The Truth Was Something You Couldn't Keep From Phelim Bawn Even when He Lost the Sight of His Eyes

By MARTIN ROWAN

Phelim Bawn was king of the island of Innish Ullra. He did not wear a crown or wield a scepter, but the leadership of the 30 families on the island was vested in him by right of judgment and strength and counsel. Six feet two he stood and every inch of it was solid bone and muscle. His hair was fair and flowing and when one saw him sitting in the prow of his boat, the Realth Na Mara, coming home from the herring fishing, or watched him standing poised on a rock watching the blood-red glow of the setting sun, one admired him and thought of the Vikings.

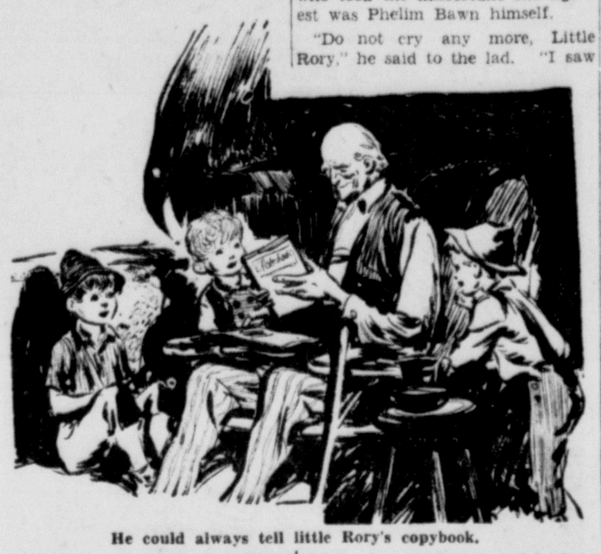

The children of the island loved him and on their way home from school they would stop at his door, or where he worked in the field, and show him the result of their days work. He always looked at their copy books and praised them all.

When the scourge of black fever struck Innish Ullra he was the only one who did not take to his bed. "God never deserted a just cause," he said. "It is how one man must be left on his feet."

That was when Rory Bourke and his wife Maura died, leaving their only child, 5-year-old Rory. It was then that two men were sent by the Board of Guardians from the mainland with a warrant to take little Rory to the poorhouse.

"It is how it is a great pity that the law did not know we were here before," said Phelim Bawn. "I got word to the mainland for help a fortnight ago, but no help came. Where was the law then?"

"The council was investigatin' your request, my good man," said one of the men.

He could always tell little Rory's copybook.

"Your councillors sit at the brink of the well with pails in their hands while the poor die of thirst," said Phelim, with great anger. "There are two laws in Innish Ullra—the law of God and the law of one man. It is how I will take charge of little Rory."

Phelim Bawn was as good as his word. He brought little Rory home and his wife Una and his daughter Mary cared for the baby as if he were their own flesh and blood.

It was a terrible shock for Innish Ullra the night Phelim Bawn was drying the damp powder for his gun and it exploded and struck him in the face. His eyes were burned and the doctors said he would never see again. The one who took the misfortune the lightest was Phelim Bawn himself.

"Do not cry any more, Little Rory," he said to the lad. "I saw plenty of mainland when I had my sight. I will not miss that at all. It will not take me long to find my own way because it was often that I traveled every foot of Innish Ullra in black darkness of night. And I have my fiddle to play and Little Rory to lead me by the hand. What more does an old man want."

After that Phelim Bawn sat many a day in the sun outside his own door. The children still brought him their copy books on their way home from school and he felt their pages and praised their work as he had done when he had his sight. It was strange how he could always tell Little Rory's copy book before anyone told him who wrote it. The grown people said it was how God never closed one gap without opening another and it was how God had given that gift to Phelim Bawn.

That was the year I left Innish Ullra and went to Australia. I was gone 25 years when I went home for a visit. The first man I inquired about was Phelim Bawn. His wife was dead and Little Rory had gone to America 10 years before, and his daughter was keeping house for him.

The old man was bedridden and fretting every day because it was three months since Little Rory had written him. The news of the death of Little Rory three months ago in a railroad accident was not given him.

After I had paid my first visit to him his daughter Mary and myself decided that I should call again in a few days and tell Phelim Bawn that I had a letter for him from Little Dory. We knew that he had not long to live and that such harmless deception would ease his mind.

When I told him that a great gladness came on him and he sat upright in bed. "Read Little Rory's letter to me, Owen," he said.

I took a letter from my pocket and began to read as I know Rory would have written.

"It is how that is great news, Owen," said Phelim. "Let me feel Little Rory's letter." I handed him the letter and he ran his fingers along the edges.

"It is how you are deceiving me, Owen," he said sadly. "That is not Little Rory's letter. It is how there was a great secret between Little Rory and myself. That was how I could tell his copybook apart from the other children. Little Rory always put a hole with a pin in the four corners of the letter. It is how Little Rory must be dead."

Mary and I sat beside the bed in silence. There was nothing we could say. The old man sat silent for a long moment. Then he fell wearily back on the pillow.

"It is how I will never hear the spring of the step of Little Rory on the bohreen any more," he said. "It is how Little Rory has gone to heaven to put the welcome before me."—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

What's in a Name! Cash, if It's Genuine

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A strange gamble in the arts followed the death of Balshazzar Caflish, 77, a barber. Caflish spent a lifetime and some $10,000 picking up paintings in obscure antique shops and at auctions. Many of the paintings bear signatures of recognized masters.

At the settlement of his estate, skeptical bidders bought the pieces for about $5 up. But if any of the major pieces turn out to be genuine, the buyer will have made a small fortune.

Woman's Magazine Editor Mother of Thanksgiving; Fought Long for Holiday

Sarah Hale's Crusade Eventually Resulted in President Lincoln's First Turkey Day Proclamation

Abraham Lincoln

Sarah Josepha Hale, "mother of Thanksgiving"

By C. DAVID VORMELKER
Central Press Staff Writer

For seventeen years, Sarah Josepha Hale worked toward the establishment of a national Thanksgiving proclamation. She advocated the move in her public writings and private communications; wrote to state governors and cabinet officials and finally in 1963, President Lincoln issued the proclamation that earned for Mrs. Hale the name of "Mother of Thanksgiving."

This proclamation was the first issued since the time of Washington, making Thanksgiving a national holiday, observed simultaneously by all the states. Prior to the 1863 announcement the various states celebrated Thanksgiving on a number of different dates.

But this Thanksgiving shows only one facet of a woman whose historical importance in the American scene will never fade.

Mrs. Hale lived a comparatively quiet life for nearly 50 years before she commenced the activities destined to make her idea a great national holiday.

She was born just after the American revolution, on her great-grandfather Daniel Buell's farm at Newport, N. H., Oct. 24, 1788. Her parents, Captain Gordon Buell, a Revolutionary soldier, and his wife, Martha Whittlesey, moved from Connecticut after the revolution and established the Hale home in the sparsely settled region of New Hampshire.

Born in an era when public education of women was unheard of, Sarah Hale received her early education from her mother and an older brother, a Dartmouth student. She continued her education with her lawyer husband, David Hale, whom she married in October, 1813. Raising a family of five was something of an achievement, but she found time to write an occasional article for the local newspapers.

Then came what seemed a disastrous blow.

Hale died suddenly in 1822, leaving his wife almost without funds and with five children to support. But Sarah Hale had the courage of a pioneer. She decided to make a living by writing, a difficult task at any time and particularly true in that period.

Mrs. Hale's first efforts were poems sent to the local periodicals, and signed "Cornelia". Then in 1823 she published her first volume of verse entitled 'The Genius of Oblivion." One of her poems won a prize offered by the Boston Spectator, in 1826, but her first introduction to a larger audience occurred in 1827 when her novel, "Northwood" was issued.

One year later, Mrs. Hale moved to Boston and began her editorship of the Ladies Magazine, a monthly periodical for women. The Ladies Magazine was the first of its type of publication to attain any real stability and significance.

Mrs. Hale wrote much of the copy herself, providing her public with sketches of American life, poetry, essays and intelligent literary criticism of a type that was very rare in periodicals of that time. No number ever was issued without a clarion call for her favorite reform: the better education of her own sex. Although Mrs. Hale was something of a liberal, the reforms she actually proposed were principally conservative.

Against Suffrage

Augusta Jane Evans, writing during this same period, agreed with Mrs. Hale on several points: the education of women, the valuable function of women as teachers, and the strong moral influence they could exert. They both were against woman suffrage.

While serving as editor of the Ladies Magazine, Mrs. Hale published several volumes of prose and verse, among them a volume, "Poems for Our Children." This contained the well-known "Mary's Lamb."

A dispute arose over the authorship of this poem and Henry Ford several years ago gave credence to a claim first made public in 1870. Mrs. Mary Sawyer Tyler said she was the "Mary" of the poem, that the original version had been 12 lines, and that a youth, John Roulstone wrote it. He died in 1822.

According to the evidence now available the poem was first published in 1830 and Mrs. Hale is still generally regarded as the author of "Mary's Lamb."

Godey's Lady's Book

Mrs. Hale became literary editor of the famous Godey's Lady's Book in 1837 when Louis Godey, at Philadelphia publisher, bought out the Ladies Magazine. Moving to Philadelphia in 1841, the energetic Mrs. Hale became the prime literary spirit of the new venture and it may truthfully be said that her high standards and realistic devotion to culture made Godey's Lady's Book the best known of all American periodicals for women until recent times.

In continunng her campaign for education, Mrs. Hale worked for the establishment of women's colleges of medicine and liberal arts and urged that women be used to present the curricula. Her articles had a profound influence on Matthew Vassar, the founder of Vassar college, once known as Vassar Female college, founded in 1861, the year of the opening of the Civil war.

Mrs. Hale's most important work is "Woman's Record: or Sketches of Distinguished Women," first published in 1853. This work contains over 1,500 biographies an sketches of women, illustrating thir history and influence on society and literature.

After a very full and active life, Mrs. Hale died at the age of 92 in 1879 in the Quaker City.

Baltimore Plant To To Triple Production

BALTIMORE, Nov. 14 (AP) — A new Baltimore plant of the Continental Can Co., Inc.,—part of a three-year, $25,000,000 expansion program—will triple the company's production capacity for crown caps, J. F. Hartlieb, Continental president, states.

The unit here, adjacent to the old plant, is expected to start operations about Jan. 1, he told company officers and directors.

Nursing Their Figures

HOUSTON, Tex., (AP) — Student nurses at Hermann hospital have been provided with bicycles.

The reason, explains Miss Mildred Mebane, director of nurses, is because nurses "hear so much about health they sometimes forget to guard their own. Bicycles are lots of fun and provide good exercise."

Moser Recommends Parole for Lawson

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 14 (AP) — Parole was in sight today for William P. Lawson, former Baltimore police commissioner and former chairman of the Republican State Central Committee.

Parole Director Herman M. Moser recommended the 59-year-old Baltimorean for parole at a hearing today. Lawson's actual release from the House of Correction now depends upon the action of Governor O'Conor, who generally follows Moser's recommendations.

Moser, who reported unfavorably on Lawson's case on two other occasions this year, recommended clemency because of the former police commissioner's health.

Because of time off allowed Lawson for good behavior, the prisoner is scheduled to be released from prison within five months, Moser said. Lawson was given three years by Judge Joseph N. Ulman in January, 1939, for conspiring to defraud customers of the Lawson brokerage firm.

Whale Stops Ship

HONOLULU, (AP) — A whale succeeded in stopping the Mariposa, a big American passenger liner, Capt. William R. Meyer reported on his arrival from Australia. The whale became wedged on the bow and had to be shaken off.

A Bicycle Built for Two Takes to Honeymoon Trail

Mr. and Mrs. James Philip Young, cycling honeymooners.

AP Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO.—The immortal Daisy, who took her wedding trip on "a bicycle built for two," has been eclipsed by Elisabeth Young.

Soon after Elisabeth's marriage to James Philip Young, a fellow magazine worker in San Francisco, the couple mounted a tandem bicycle and spent five months and ten days on the road.

They dipped their machine in the Pacific, crossed the country and dipped it in the Atlantic. Then they pedaled back to their point of departure. They covered 7,100 miles, every inch of it by their own motive power.

They had two punctures, several blowouts. Chief mechanical trouble was the breaking of spokes.

After initial stiffness and soreness were over, they made from 70 to 100 miles a day.

100 Boys Share in Agricultural Prizes

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 14 (AP)—One hundred boys from scattered points in the United States have shared $5,000 in prizes awarded by the Future Farmers of America in five national vocational agriculture judging contests. The awards were announced at the organization's annual banquet.

The national title in general livestock judging went to the Dresden, Ohio, team of Paul Lacy, Richard Graham and Forrest Huff. Second place was won by the Pennsylvania team.

Robert Pennington, Quarryville, Penn., High School youth, was high individual in the contest and received a $300 scholarship to the agricultural college of his own selection.

The national title in poultry judging was awarded the Huntsville, Mo., team. The Maryland team from Jarrettsville and Crownsville placed fifth.

Winner of the milk judging title was the Virginia team, made up of Gaylon Limerick, Stafford; Archer Bowman, Boone Mill, and Andrew Garnet, Bowling Green.

Siamese Nobleman, Unperturbed By Oriental Crises, Studies Law Enforcement Methods in the U. S.

By WILLIAM A. BAKER, Jr.

East Lansing, Mich., Nov. 12. — While the Kingdom of Thailand (Siam) is claiming the attention of American newspaper readers through its alleged invasion of French Indo-China and subsequent action by the United States government stopping shipment of 10 American-made warplanes ordered by Thailand, Singkata Tongyai, son of a Siamese prince, is quietly studying American methods of peace and law enforcement which he hopes eventually to put into practice in his picturesque homeland.

The Siamese people, most of whom are Buddhists, are little given to violent crime or even quarreling, says this Oriental student of polygraph, black light and Bertillon measurements. On the contrary, they are law-abiding, gentle, patient, kindly and hospitable to strangers.

Singkata Tongyai, now an American student, with head of a wild bull he killed in Siam. Map shows location of his country.

Tongyai, a student of police administration at Michigan State college here, turned to the tracking of criminals from stalking ferocious beasts in the Asian jungle.

He is pictured here with the head of a wild bull he killed 500 miles north of Bangkok, the Siamese capital. The bull had started to charge the young hunter when he brought it down at 150 yards with a 10.75 double express bullet through the neck.

Tongyai has killed tigers, also, but wild cattle and water buffaloes are far more dangerous to hunt, he says, "because you have to stalk them in the bush, and when you wound one of them it charges straight at you. In tiger hunting you just build a blind and stake out a dead animal in front of it for bait, then sit down and wait with your gun. After dark, the tiger approaches to eat the bait; then you get him.

Shooting the heads off venomous 10-foot cobras with a shotgun was mere camp routine on Tongyai's hunting expeditions. "Cobras frequently are found 'hiding' in the city of Bangkok," he observes, and added, "a number of them have been discovered in my garden."

There are 12 venomous species of snakes in Tongyai's country, which, although not quite so large as Texas, has twice as many people. Bangkok, the largest city, has about the same population as Cleveland, one-third of its inhabitants being Chinese there are several hundred Americans and Europeans.

Almost all the natives of Siam are peasants who cultivate fields of rice and live in houses of bamboo or other light material set on stilts beside rivers and canals which serve as the principal avenues of communication and commerce.

One of the world's few remaining absolute monarchies until eight years ago, Thailand was ruled by King Prajadhipok, who, with a few hundred relatives, received some 90 per cent of the country's revenue. A bloodless revolution in 1932 brought about the abdication of Prajadhipok in favor of a nephew, Ananda Maridol, nine-year-old schoolboy, then in Switzerland.

A national trend toward liberalism was accompanied by steadily increasing Japanese influence. Three years ago Thailand was spending one-fourth of its annual budget, or $50,000,000, for "defense," and in 1938 the army minister, Col. Luang Bipul Songgram, became the actual ruler of the country. He now is premier.

Recently, with a demonstration of military, naval and aeronautical power, Thailand demanded that the Vichy government of France return Laos and Cambodian territories acquired by Indo-China in 1907. The demand was refused.

The Vichy government later charged that Thailand airplanes were violating the French Indo-China frontier systematically in groups of from 20 to 40. The flights ranged deep into Indo-China, the French asserted, and began simultaneously with the appearance of Thailand border re-enforcements after Vichy refused, for a second time, demands for frontier revisions.

Thailand advanced its territorial claims against French Indo-China at the same time that Japan was sending military forces into that colony. Thailand's resources include tin, manganese, tungsten, antimony, quicksilver and rubber — war materials needed by Japan.

A few weeks ago 20,000 workers paraded in Bangkok to emphasize Thailand's claim against French Indo - China, whereupon Hugh Grant, United States minister to the quaint kingdom, went to the royal palace and, it is understood, restated the principles of American foreign policy, embracing the status quo in that part of the world.

Stocks Rally, but Profit Taking Interferes with General Advance

Renewal of Inflation Talk Bolsters Prices for a Time

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (AP)—Intermittent and selective rallies speeded up the stock market today but profit taking interfered with a general advance and closing prices were irregularly higher.

It was the eighth consecutive session in which volume topped the million-share mark. Transfers for the day totalled 1,384,290 shares against 1,068,250 yesterday.

Spurring the specialized run-up, brokers said, was a slight revival of inflationary thinking, an assortment of boosted dividends, pleasing industrial earning statements and renewed optimism over European war developments. Strength of commodities also were a bolstering influence.

U. S. Rubber common and preferred, Goodyear and Goodrich held gains of one or more than four points. And heavy demand for copper in armament and private consumption stimulated shares in this group. Forecasts of growing petroleum requirements propped the oils.

Prominent on the advancing side were Chrysler, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, Phelps, Dodge, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Texas Corp., Boeing, Doe Chemical and preferred issues of General Steel Castings, American Woolen and Market Street Railway.

Among losers were Consolidated Edison, Western Union, American Telephone, American Water Works and Public Service of New Jersey.

Forward leanings in the Curb were shown by Aluminum of America., Brewster Aero, Bell Aaircraft, Colts Patent Firearms, Gulf Oil, International Petroleum and New Jersey Zinc. The turnover here was around 241,000 shares versus 182,000 the day before.

McCracken, Eckhart, was the soloist of the evening and led the group singing. He was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. McCracken.

Winterberg Presides

William Winterberg, president of the Garrett County Farm Bureau, extended welcome and served as toastmaster. In opening the program, Franklin E. Rathbun, county superintendent of schools, Walter W. Dawson, president of the county school board, both of Oakland, and R. C. Wilson, Cumberland, president of the Allegany County Farm Bureau, were called upon for brief remarks. Mr. P. C. Turner, Baltimore, president of the Maryland State Farm Bureau, also made a short talk and congratulated the Garrett County Bureau on reaching its quota of 100 members. He pointed out that in the twenty-three counties of the state, there were twenty-three Farm Bureaus. He touched upon the growth of the organization, explaining why, and introduced Dr. R. B. Corbett, director of the experiment station at the University of Maryland, College Park, who was the principal speaker.

The theme of Dr. Corbett's address was the "Need of Organization in Agriculture", particularly at this time. In this connection he offered comparisons of the situation of the farmer with various branches of organized labor. Prices too, were given as vital to the success of agriculture in the future and Dr. Corbett stated an organized force back of them was the only means whereby the farmers could do anything to remedy low prices and high debt burdens.

Experiments Helpful

He explained the value of the experiment station to the farmer and gave as one example a new variety of potato, which, being blight resistant, had increased the potato yield 100 bushels per acre. He spoke of the need of organization in marketing farm products, a problem which the state farm is working on at present. The speaker said there were eighty farm bureau discussion groups in the county in which approximately 1000 farm people participated, and recounted briefly some of the things the bureau, as an organization, has accomplished in the county.

C. E. Wise, Baltimore, secretary of the state farm bureau, in a short talk, pointed out that agriculture had kept pace with other lines of work except in distribution. It was necessary to solve distribution to solve the farmers problem, he said, and advocated the cooperative enterprise as a means to the solution. He named fertilizer and feed among some of the items on which the cost to the farmer had been lessened by the cooperative system. He also mentioned the democracy shown in the establishment of the discussion groups, the first of which was started three years ago.

There was also a short talk by Wilbert Smith, Western Shore field man from the state office at Baltimore. In answer to the question, "Does It Pay to Belong to the Farm Bureau Organization?" Mr. Smith listed the following things which had been secured for the farmer through the efforts of the organization: The value of the Extension Service and how they had been assisted by the Farm Bureau Organization; savings in interest rates; commodity loans; rural electrification program; reforestation; appropriations for A.A.A. and Soil Conservation programs; and several others. He suggested to the farmers to "know what you want and then go after it in a unified way".

Other Guests Presented

Among others who acknowledged introductions by Mr. Winterberg were J. A. Conover, specialist in dairy husbandry; Albin Kuhn, assistant professor of agronomy; Joseph

Joseph Weber, pastor of Holy Rosary Catholic church, Baltimore, and a former assistant pastor of St. Michael's church. The Rev. Francis Montgomery sered as deacon and the Rev. Dominis A. Bonomo, sub-deacon. The Rev. Father Patrick J. Bradley, pastor of St. Michael's was in the sanctuary.

The honorary pall bearers were Hugh Thompson, Buffalo, N. Y., and William Lynch, Washington, D. C., representing the national office of the CIO., Washington, D. C., and the following CIO labor leaders: Arthur Force, Belleville, N. J.; E. L. Howard, Baltimore; N. H. Eagles and Herbert Dawson, Akron, Ohio; Irvin Abramson, Patterson, N. J.; James Sweeney, Trenton, N. J. Leonard Goldsmith, Newark, N. J., and James Dundon, Cumberland.

The active pall bearers were William Spates, II, Rose LaPorta, Albert Stoopes, Thomas McKernan, Joseph Cosgrove and Francis Rooney.

Out-of-town relatives here for the funeral were Miss Grace Carney and Miss Clinton Skipper, Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Malloy, Aliquippa, Pa.; Miss Cecelia Spates and Miss Anna Smith, Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. William Footen, College Heights, Md., and Miss Anna McKee, Baltimore.

Fought Mayor Hague

Mr. Carney was one of the leaders in the fight for civil rights in which the CIO and other groups opposed Mayor Hague and other officials of New Jersey several years ago, the Newark News said in commenting on Carney's death.

"After their victory in Federal Court, Mr. Carney, as head of the state CIO, was host to labor leaders and others, including the late Heywood Broun, at a mass meeting in Pershing Field, Jersey City. The field had been the scene of incidents which led to the civil rights court case.

"Mr. Carney was also a militant leader in the internal affairs of the national CIO. In 1939 he left New Jersey to participate in the factional fight of the United Automobile Workers in Detroit which resulted in the ousting of Homer Martin, the union's president. Mr. Carney's most recent activity was in connection with a brief walkout early this year in the Kearny shipyards.

Was Staunch Unionist

"Among the CIO unionists in the state, Mr. Carney was known as a man who would not use a toothpick unless he was certain it was manufactured by a member of organized labor. Because of this he endangered his life three years ago when he was forced to undergo an emergency operation in a Newark hospital.

"As a nurse was wheeling him into the operating room he demanded to see her union card. She had none. Mr. Carney insisted there would be no operation until he had a nurse with a union card. The attending physician, worried about Mr. Carney's condition, made a vain effort to obtain his permission to start. The operation was postponed more than an hour until the hospital found a nurse with a card.

"A close friend of John L. Lewis, Mr. Carney was on record in support of President Roosevelt. He declined comment when Mr. Lewis broke with the President during the recent campaign. He took the position that union members, as citizens, had the inallenable right to vote for whom they pleased without influence from any source."

She Is Not a Slave to Fashion

By AMY PORTER
AP Feature Service Writer

It's supposed to be axiomatic that all women, no matter, how individualistic in some ways, are slaves to fashion on three points: The color of their lipstick, the length of their skirts, and the color of their stockings.

To which Madame Valentina, dressmaker de luxe, answers "Really?" crossing her defiant gray-stockinged legs (doesn't Valentina know that ALL stockings are beige this season?)

Fashion rules operate in reverse for the incorrigible Valentina, who holds "No woman can be well-dressed until she forgets the rules and looks to her own anatomy."

Makes the Rules

And her clients, most of them well known in society or the theatre, bow to Valentina's I-do-as-I-like rulings on clothes. Suppose Lynn Fontaine orders a blue dress "with sequins, please." Valentina may send her instead a red dress without trimming of any sort. "Better for you," she states.

The customers love it.

Gladys Swarthout, Metropolitan opera singer, trustingly places her clothes problems in Valentina's hands, and at the moment is reveling in the result—a brand new wardrobe.

Four Fundamentals

At first glance, this wardrobe looks conservative. Its fundamentals are a black silk dress for daytime, a lavender suit for train wear, a long blue wool dress for afternoon concerts and parties, and a formal silver and black lame gown for evening.

But look close and you'll see the Valentina touch.

The daytime skirts, for instance, are 15 inches from the floor, much longer than most people are wearing.

"That is the correct length for Miss Swarthout," reports Valentina. "Not one-quarter inch more or less. A skirt should strike the leg at a full point, just before it narrows into the knee. This is the only correct point, no matter how many inches from the floor."

Short Jacket

The suit has a short jacket, contrary to the season's trend but in perfect accord with Miss Swarthout's figure. It is designed for wear with either sports or dress accessories.

The daytime dress fits superbly, and has, as an accessory, a long belt woven of gold thread. This belt loops around the neck, necklace fashion, crosses in front and ties around the waist.

The long blue wool is Miss Swarthout's "concert uniform," copy of a good-luck dress Valentina designed for her years ago. It is soft in texture, less flamboyant than typical "opera star" clothes. With it shoe sometimes wears the golden girdle that brightens the black daytime dress.

Accessories are varied, colorful, packable—a huge knitted muff bag, collapsible hat with towering tassel, wide leather belt, little crocheted gloves in bright colors. Such gadgets lend infinite variety to the simplest clothes.

Because she can't bear high heels, Miss Swarthout wears jeweled sandals with two-inch soles to increase her height. Her hair style remains the same year in and year out, regardless of pompadours. It's a long bob, softly arranged, with a middle part.

"That is right for Miss Swarthout," says Valentina, tossing back her own astounding hair style, which is asymetrical, with one side hanging down inches longer than the other.

MISS SWARTHOUT'S "concert uniform" is soft blue wool girdled in gold.

THE TRAIN SUIT becomes a tea party suit with frilly accessories.

THE GOLD BELT serves as a necklace on Gladys Swarthout's black daytime dress.

Thousands of wild geese, ducks and swans, flying southward, paused in Garrett county today and alighted on Deep Creek Lake, the Youghiogheny river and many smaller streams.

They first arrived about 11 o'clock last night around Oakland and early today hunters were out in droves. By noon at least a hundred had been bagged. The post office sold out of the special stamps early today and hunters had to procure them from nearby town postoffices.

One of the birds brought down by Mayor L. M. Fraley of Oakland, weighed over seventeen pounds, while Emroy Bolden displayed three this morning each weighing more than fifteen pounds.

Veteran hunters said they would remain here today on account of the fog and rainy weather and would not fly far, even when scared by the gunners.

he did this because he "felt that I could be of more service to my country if I were free to write and speak without the restrictions imposed by official position."

No official information was available on whether Kennedy had submitted his resignation but it was believed he had made known to the president his desire to be relieved. After talking with President Roosevelt and state department officials Kennedy said he had no plans about going back to London.

Bullitt said he had expressed orally to the president several times his desire to resign and engage in speaking and writing. On November 7—two days after the election—he said he tendered his resignation in writing.

"The president again, as previously, expressed his wish that I should not resign, and there for the present the matter rests," Bullitt said.

Bullitt, first ambassador to Soviet Russia after the United States resumed diplomatic relations with that country in 1933, and ambassador in France during the critical pre-war years and until after the French defeat, was understood to have planned an intensive speaking and writing campaign in behalf of national preparedness.

Whatever decision Bullitt reaches, it was considered doubtful that he would return to France or that Kennedy would go back to London.

Flock of Wild Geese Attrack Attention

Many residents of Grantsville and neighboring communities were awakened from their slumbers last night by a loud and unusual squawking and clatter and several of the more curious persons arose to investigate. Others, too, who had not yet retired, appeared with flashlights to see what it was all about. Those who were familiar with the sound however, recognized it as the "honking" of a large flock of wild geese. The birds flew about over the town all night and some were heard early this morning. Various estimates gave the number as between several hundred and more than a thousand. They were first sighted flying in formation directly south and it was thought they became confused in the heavy fog and lights from the town. According to reports, this was not the only community to witness this "hunters dream", as the birds were heard as far away as Meyersdale, a distance of about fourteen miles, it was said.

Thinking the geese might have settled on the Casselman river or some nearby lake because of the continued heavy weather, a few hunters inquired at the local post office for stamps which are required for hunting wild geese, but that office had discontinued handling them, not having had any calls for them for some time.

Those who failed to see this large flock in formation missed a most interesting spectacle, and some of those who did see it wished for a gun and daylight.

School Child's Woes and How Parents Can Help

Doctor Gives Some Suggestions and Materials to Read on Subject

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Now that your child has been in school for several weeks, it might be well to take stock of him.

How about his health? Does he seem to have grown more excitable and irritable? Does he go to sleep promptly? Is he going to bed early enough? Does he play out of doors every day when the weather is fit?

Is he getting on fairly well with other children? Is he a bully? Has he been worried by bullies who intimidate him at school or on the way? Does he come home promptly from school? Does he get himself ready on school mornings and find his own things or do all the family have to help him?

Know Your Child

Have you had any complaint from his teacher about his conduct at school? Does he seem to be getting on well at school with his lessons? Does he have home work at an earlier age than you think he should? If in the fourth, fifth or sixth grade, does he have long assignments in spelling and arithmetic? Does he get worried over his lessons? When you help him do you grow tense and angry or are you always calm and serene?

So far as the child's behavior at school is concerned, you should try to find out what has happened at home for months and months which might cause such behavior away from home. Then with the aid of the teacher or an expert, try to ascertain what guidance in this child at home might be made during the next few months with the hope of causing after some weeks some improvement in his conduct at school.

Don's Nag Children

Still less wise to command the child at home to pay more strict attention at school or study harder there. Therefore, if your child lags in any or all his school subjects, it is not a matter for you to get mad about or to exhort and scold and punish the child. If you really wish to help him, you will try to find out definitely how, when he tries to study, you can contribute toward his success at it.

Hoping to encourage parents to further the child's school learning rather than to hinder it, I have prepared some definite suggestions and materials in reading, spelling and arithmetic. You may have any one of the following, without cost, by writing me at 235 East 45th Street, N. Y. City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it:

1. Home Helps for Poor Readers of Second, Third and Fourth Grades.
2. Home Helps for Poor Readers Above the Fourth Grade.
3. Home Helps for Poor Spellers.
4. The 100 Addition Facts and 100 Subtraction Facts for Child to Learn by Heart.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. How early should you begin to read to the baby?

A. As soon as he will keep looking at a picture for half a minute or so at a stretch. The average child will do so early in his second year. Read to him while he looks. Months earlier you should sing lullabies and say nursery rhymes to him while caring for him. A list of illustrated books from which to read to the baby and young child may be had by writing to me at 235 East 45th Street, N. Y. City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Q. Do you approve of prizes at children's parties?

A. Not as usually given. One prize might be warranted for the child who, in the judgment of the hostess, has proved most unselfish at the party and most thoughtful of others. What do you suppose happens to the child who wins several of the prizes? How do the other children feel toward him?

Despairing Youth Should Be Helped, Writer Declares

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A corespondent who, to my way of thinking, does not understand human nature has sent me a newspaper clipping about a girl who attempted to commit suicide but didn't succeed in anything but getting her name in the papers.

She took an overdose of sleeping powder and, as sometimes happens in such cases, the dose was too heavy to work. On returning to consciousness she said: "I'm afraid I'm going to get well." Physicians worked ten days to save the girl's life, all of which time she was in a coma.

Conclusively she has proved that her health is miraculous. Her young strong body is a thing at which to marvel. Why hasn't a girl still in her twenties, with such vitality, had youth's birthright to happiness? The motive she ascribed for the attempt on her life was that no one loved her. Her working surroundings were uncongenial, and she saw no other way out of a world that had no place for her.

Is Worth Living

I, for one, hope this girl is going to get well. Many persons who have been snatched from the brink have in some mysterious way been brought to the consciousness that life is worth living. Many have made surprising successes of life after the new leaf has been turned.

It's hard for oldsters to understand the despair that can completely overwhelm a girl of twenty. We know nothing is hopeless as long as there is youth with which to fight battles. At the moment, the world needs every pair of willing hands it can summon. If this girl has been disillusioned with life so early, here's her chance to do useful work.

If she would take training for some of the community work that must be done while the wives of men in training camps go back to their jobs, she would at least have the satisfaction of knowing that she's a useful cog in the scheme of things. Perhaps this is the turning of the tide for this modern Cinderella.

All Have Same Weakness

The lady who sent me the newspaper clipping said the girl was a snob because she went to a fashionable hotel "to die among nice people." My correspondent didn't, I think, fully realize the elements that go to make up youth. All her life, this girl had wanted to know "nice people." Being deprived of that, she took her pitiful little savings and went to New York to die as she would have liked to live.

Maybe there was a dash of snobbishness in it, but haven't we all some trace of that weakness? Our snobbishness may be nothing more than an overwhelming desire to be the president of our town's woman's club. Maybe we're convinced that we can sing, play, go on the radio, and give a better account of ourselves than the people who have contracts to do these things. And isn't that snobbishness?

Patience Not Always a Virtue

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 19 years of age and have been going around with a boy of the same age. He is jealous of my girl friend's boy friend because he comes to see me occasionally. He tells me I mean more to him than any girl, he wants me to go "steady" and then he says he wants to go with other girls too. He is leaving it up to me whether he should do this. He seems to think that all the girls will go out with him.

He tells all the other boys to stay away from my house, and takes me every place he goes, but when he is with other girls he snubs me. I can't understand just what he wants of me. Could you tell me how to handle him?

PUZZLED SUSAN.

Doubtless you've heard, my dear, that old reliable proverb: "What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." The young man struts when other boys suggest calling on you. Yet he feels at liberty to go out with other girls. Where is your independence? How he should be handled, you ask? The best method would be to put him in his place.

Prefers Companionship

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I start going with a girl, I try to make it clear to her that it's a case of friendship only. But she, on the other hand, starts rushing me off to the altar, and I have to run to shelter. I am not in a position to marry, and don't want to waste a girl's time, or keep her from a better chance; therefore, I never go "steady". How can I get around this?

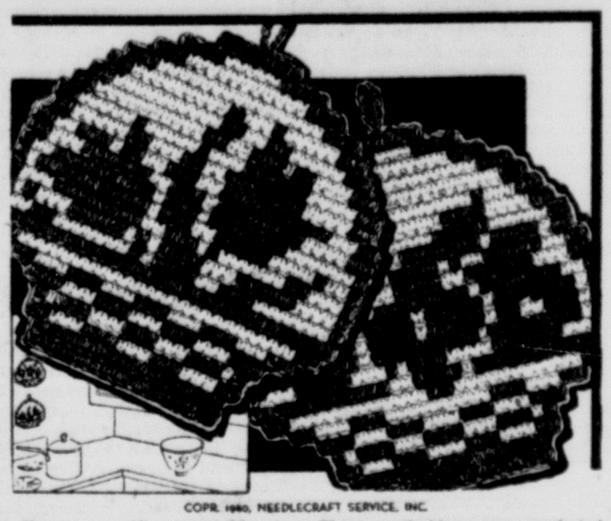

P. Q.

The young ladies you meet are evidently highly romantic, more in love with love than the individual. If you want a real pal, look around for a different type of girl than those you're seeing now. Plenty of young business girls are willing to have the companionship of a young man who has no thought of becoming serious. I know this is true, because they write me many letters.

Eight Theological Students Jailed Under Draft Act

All Refuse To Register under National Selective Service Laws

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (AP) — In a courtroom crowded with grave-faced men and women, eight young theological students reiterated today their refusal to register for selective service and were sentenced to serve a year and a day in federal prison.

Courtroom attaches said the scene was one of the most solemn they had witnessed when Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum, just before passing sentence, gave the men an opportunity to register "at this last minute."

The roll was called. Each refused and Judge Mandelbaum passed sentence.

"Conscientious objectors" from Union Theological Seminary, the men pleaded guilty when they were indicted Oct. 21 for refusing to register in compliance with the selective training and service act—a felony under federal law.

Faced Longer Term

The court noted that the maximum term possible was five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine and added that if at any time within the sentence imposed any of the defendants decided to comply with the act, the court would be "only too happy" to moderate the sentences.

Kenneth Walzer, counsel for the students, told the court that "their consciences hold them to the teachings of the Great Master."

"They believe those teachings to mean what they say," he added, "and they find in them instructions to have nothing to do with the mass killing which is called war..."

All College Men

The eight and the colleges from which they were graduated are: William N. Lovell, 26, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., president of the Union theological student body and a Yale graduate; Richard J. Wichlei, 23, Binghamton, N. Y., Syracuse; Donald Benedict, 23, Newark, N. Y., Albion; David Dellinger, 25, Wakefield, Mass., Yale; Meredith Dallas, 23, Grosse Point, Mich., Albion; George M. Houser, 24, Denver, University of Denver; Joseph G. Bevilacqua, 24, Buffalo, N. Y., Tufts, and Howard E. Spragg, 23, Malden, Mass., Tufts.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Hitler-Molotoff conversations in Berlin, trumpeted in advance by Nazi propagandists as foreshadowing a new political coup, came to an end under circumstances which raise doubts as to the real importance of the meetings.

What was happening simultaneously to Mussolini in Greece and in Italian home waters must actually have been of far greater concern to Herr Hitler than his vaguely indicated deal with Russia.

What does matter for Hitler is that Il Duce is taking a beating at the hands of the Greeks and British sea and air power. In the judgment of neutral observers recently in Italy it would take little in the way of defeats to cause a serious break in Italian public morale.

British Morale High

No such deal as the granting to Moscow of a special sphere of influence in the proposed new "world order" can offset Italian military reverses. Such an agreement would leave Russia to collect her spoils from the British empire. If Molotoff tentatively accepted any such arrangement, it must have been with his tongue in his cheek. What was happening to the Italians at the hands of the Greeks and British did not indicate that the British empire had yet begun to crack up.

On the contrary, British prestige and morale is unquestionably higher today than it has been at any time since the battle of Britain began last June. There are growing symptoms that German intrigue with the Vichy government in conquered France has encountered a serious stumbling block.

Two Major Factors

The major factors tending to overshadow the Russo-German conversation, however, are the Greek stand against Italian aggression, and the British air attacks on Italy's fleet. Rome's reply to the British claims sounds more like a tacit admission than a refutation.

An Associated Press observer on a British battleship tells how British navy planes, returned from the attack on Taranto, reported that they had left one Italian battleship aflame and two others beached or half submerged. The reporter's account was radioed from a point "off Taranto."

That is an important item. It means that British capital ships as well as submarines and aircraft are operating virtually in Italian home waters.

Fascist Armies Faltering

An Athens report tells of withdrawal of Italian troops from the Albanian - Yugoslavian border to back up the faltering Fascist armies confronting Greece. The implication is that the Italian high command was desperately trying to prevent a complete breakdown.

Against that background of war developments, the vague generalities in which Berlin describes the Hitler-Molotoff negotiations appear significant. Had there been anything commiting Russia to direct or indirect military action to aid the Axis it would have been shouted from the house tops.

Roger Cunningham Doomed to Death In Electric Chair

Wife-Slayer Denied Insanity Hearing by Oklahoma Governor

By FRANCIS E. BARDEN

McALESTER, Okla., Nov. 14 (AP)—A dramatic series of last hour moves to save Roger Cunningham from electrocution failed late today, and the doomed man who strangled his pretty wife and said he was insane waited nervously for midnight and death.

Attorney Herbert K. Hyde, denied a sanity hearing for his 34-year-old client by Gov. Leon C. Phillips, appealed in vain to the courts.

District Judge R. W. Higgins refused writs of habeas corpus and mandamus to force a mental test. At Oklahoma City, the Criminal Court of Appeals did the same thing.

Hyde's only recourse was the governor, who asserted the question of sanity had been tried in the legal, orderly way. The prisoner pleaded insanity at his trial.

Cunningham, his hair iron gray and showing the thirty pounds he has gained in the last year, sat in his death cell a few hours before midnight, his head shaven, nervously snapping matches, but saying little.

Warden Jess Dunn asked him if he wanted anything. He didn't.

Cunningham was only twelve steps from the worn, scuffed death chair which has been in use since statehood. Fifty-eight men have died in that chair.

Cunningham, former FHA inspector, entered the prison one year ago today. The intervening time has been uneventful in contrast to Cunningham's first trip to jail after his wife's death.

At that time in March, 1939, the comely Eudora Cunningham was missing. The husband was taken into custody for questioning, but there was no word of suspicion that he had slain her.

"Honey, please come home!" Cunningham cried out in his jail cell at Oklahoma City.

For nineteen days the case was a mystery, then at 1:45 a. m., March 25, County Attorney Lewis Morris said Cunningham had confessed that on "Monday night, March 6, at 7:30 p. m. I strangled my wife Eudora and buried her in a partly filled sewer ditch x x x x may God have mercy on my soul."

He did not testify at his trial.

more hopeful there citing the recent bold attack of the British air arm on the Italian fleet and the routing of two divisions of Mussolini's army by the Greek army.

"There is reason to believe that the Italians do not have their heart in this war," he said. "Italy has found herself shut up in the Mediterranean and the fact that every adult has been cut down to a half pint of olive oil a week isn't helping that attitude."

Meanwhile, Great Britain has reenforced her position in Egypt and the Italian invasion of Africa has not proved an insurmountable menace, Major Eliot said. And despite the fact that the Italians are right on the so-called British life line through the Red Sea, Indian Ocean et al, this line is as wide open today as ever, he said.

In the third area of conflict, the Far East, Japan has joined with Germany and Italy to form a new world order, the speaker said.

"This gets to us," he said simply.

Foreign Trade Important

Referring to the richness of the Far East as a mecca for trade, Major Eliot said "don't let people tell you we can cut off foreign trade. Foreign trade is vitally important to us. We have in the Far East a trade area of great consequence."

In a summary of the conflict, Major Eliot characterized sea power as all important, said a warring nation cannot continue long without it. Bases are therefore necessary, he said. And these bases can be provided on the continent of North America.

"That is why our willingness to face risks mean so much in the reconstruction of the world," he said. "To reply to the challenge of the new order, we are evolving into a new world order of our own depending on sea power with the British Commonwealth."

"This does not mean invading Europe," he said. "We can't do it. That is not our genius or the British genius. It is ridiculous to think of fighting to restore the Polish corridor, for instance. Sea and air power is the answer."

In answer to a question, "How will Britain win?" Major Eliot gave further clues on probable procedure when he replied, "not through invasion. Possibly by a disintegration of the alliance with Italy, possibly starvation, possibly by the dislocation in Europe's industry.

"Europe", Major Eliot said, driving home the point, "cannot exist unless in communication with other countries."

Better Organization Needed

Asked if the United States would eventually have to help England in controlling the seas, the speaker replied, "yes, very likely. This country will have to help if complete control is acquired."

Asked what would insure greater success in our armament program, Major Eliot replied, "better organization, there has been too much lost motion and refusal to designate authority."

Asked if the fall of France was due to "New Dealish" policies and fifth columnists, the speaker replied they were contributing factors but that it is not correct to say they were the only causes.

Asked how we could give immediate aid to Britain, Major Eliot said probably by assuming convoy responsibilities.

Asked if this country would engage as a belligerent Major Eliot replied that "it didn't make much difference, that such terms have little meaning."

Asked "how far can we go?", the speaker replied that "we are involved in it right now. Can't help being involved. Our interests are bound up in it."

Hold Last Rites For Chamberlain

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Nov. 14 — The ashes of former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain were placed beneath the stone floor of Westminster abbey today in a silence broken only by the voice of the arch-bishop of Canterbury commending his spirit to God.

The Angelican service for the man who had tried to avert the war lasted forty minutes in an interval between air raid warnings.

At the end of the ritual, the choir sang. Mrs. Chamberlain, heavily veiled, knelt on the floor and, taking charysanthemum petals from her handbag, dropped them softly into the small crypt where the urn rested.

The public was excluded and those who went to the cold gray abbey—including the Duke of Gloucester, representing the royal family, Prime Minister Winston Churchill and his cabinet, and dignitaries of the church—were quietly admitted as they presented cards marked "secret."

The order of the burial service, printed in blue ink, was headed with an air raid precaution in flaming red.

Chamberlain died last Saturday. His body was cremated yesterday.

Banner Hunting Season Predicted

Full Bag Limit Every Day, Chief Norris Declares

BALTIMORE, Nov. 14 (AP)—State game and Inland Fish Commission officials forecast today one of the best upland game-hunting seasons Maryland has offered in years.

Shooting begins at sunrise tomorrow, continuing daily through December 31, except Sundays.

After a survey of reports from the counties, Chief Deputy Game Warden Richard Norris predicted "the full bag limit every day for every hunter."

"The outlook is particularly good for quail and turkeys," Norris said. "There are plenty of rabbits, although the reports show some sections will offer far better rabbit-hunting than others. The prospects are excellent iln Montgomery, Baltimore and Frederick counties."

Best pheasant territory is the limestone areas of Frederick and Carroll counties, Norris noted, with Frederick and Washington counties offering the best chances for grouse-hunters.

Quail are plentiful througtout the state, the reports indicated.

Nearly 14,000 quail were set out in the covers by the game department in the last year.

Daily bag limits for various types of game include six bob white, six rabbits, two pheasants (limit to six per person), and one turkey, (limit or four per season).

Norris reported prospects for the five-day deer season, opening Dec. 2, also appeared excellent. He said a number of deer had been seen in Cecil county, where few hunters ordinarily go.

Sportsmen To Meet

An important meeting of the Allegany-Garrett County Sportsmen's association will be held today at 8 p. m., at Fireman's hall, Water street, Frostburg.

45 White Swans Killed Illegally

Many Ducks Also Come Down in Somerset County During Fog

SOMERSET, Pa., Nov. 14 (AP) — Hunters' guns cracked today along shores of Somerset county ponds and reservoirs where thousands of ducks and white swans — breaking off their flight south — sought temporary refuge.

A report that some forty-five white swans had fallen before nimrods' guns brought game wardens here from neighboring counties.

Observers reported the birds, flying in from the northwest storm sections, came into Somerset county in flocks of 300 to 400 that resemble "clouds." They apparently became confused in a dense fog, sighted the Casselman river and followed it into the county.

They picked out a score or more of quiet ponds and reservoirs to rest, including the Quemahoning and McDonaldton dams and the Baltimore and Ohio railroad dams at Garrett.

Sportsmen said they believed it was the first time the birds had flown here in such numbers since 1924.

Game Protector John Shuler identified the birds tonight as Canadian whistling swan and warned there is a state penalty of $10 for each one killed.

The swan weighing from fifteen to eighteen pounds each, were accompanied by numerous types of ducks. Shuler said he did not believe there were any geese.

The birds remained overnight because the fog had not cleared. A light snow was falling.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

FRAN SHOOK her head sadly. "You don't need me, Kit," she said gently. "We aren't partners. I just live with you and get paid for it. I don't do anything for you. And I can't do anything with you."

Kit felt distinctly uncomfortable. She smiled experimentally and said. "Come on, darling, it's hot and you've got a grouch on. Didn't you always say that we were entitled to a few good times? And aren't you having a lot of dates with Lars Anderson?" Lars was the drummer who cherished an honest passion for Fran and her cookery.

Fran bit her underlip and was silent. But not for long. She said, "Look, Kit, we're on the subject now and we might as well have it out. Whether I have lots of dates with Lars is of no importance to your career, which IS the subject. I'm not trying to get anywhere. You are! Or you ought to be."

"Didn't you say that Morris White may be able to get me on at the Pond club? And have I not a contract that is as ironclad as any can be? Jerry told you himself that he was doing even bigger things next season."

Fran paid no heed to Kit's words and continued, "Look here, Kit, use your head. You can't stay where you are without working for it. And unless you work hard you won't ever get any further. Right now, in case it hasn't occurred to you, you get paid—overpaid—for doing practically nothing. It may work for a little while, but sooner or later you're going to wind up back of the eight ball."

Kit ran her fingers through her hair and gave a despairing sigh; it was no use trying to placate Fran when she was being unreasonable. But she tried again:

"After all, Jerry is satisfied. What else do you want? I study and work, don't I? Do I have to skip everything else in my life to practice all day to sing a couple of songs a week? Two songs any high school kid could learn in an hour?"

"That's just it," Fran said slowly. "That's the way you sing 'em, too. Any kid with an ounce of brains knows the answer."

Kit was hastily turning the pages of a newspaper and, finding what she wanted, showed the page to Fran triumphantly. "Have a look at this. It's the Crosley rating on the Sembler program and it is still tops!"

Fran said wearily, "Why wouldn't it be? Look at the support you've got. Jerry's had every guest star to help you out except Toscaninni and Shirley Temple. And when you started, the whole credit, the whole darned show might have been yours, a platinum setting for a jewel, the jewel being you."

Kit laughed merrily. "You're a pig, Fran. A nice, pretty blonde, one who wants me to grab the whole thing and use it for my personal use. I've got some news for you. We're going off the air for a couple of weeks."

"Won't that be nice?" Fran said with cold politeness.

"Two whole weeks not to think of a musical note."

"That's certainly going to be a change for you." Fran's voice was withering.

"You're a kill-joy and a meanie, Kit told her amiably. "Have you had your supper?"

"Yes, but I'll get something for you."

"No, I'll do it," Kit told her.

Fran brushed her aside brusquely. "If I'm getting paid, I might as well earn my salary as a waitress, anyway."

Kit caught her and, putting her arms around her, laid her cheek against her shoulder. "Don't be this way, Fran. It makes me unhappy. You know you're all the family I've got."

Fran smiled reluctantly, and melted as she always did when Kit approached her that way. "There's chilled soup, chicken sandwiches and iced tea."

Pouring milk into a glass, Fran said, "Don't you ever think of your voice as something to which you owe a responsibility? Something you have to think of before anything else? Back in the old days you used to tell me that you wanted to sing in light opera, to use the gift of your voice."

"I used to say lots of things in the old days, but we grow up and our ideas change, Fran. After all, that was childish and romantic dreaming. And I do think about my voice, but I don't worry about it. If I weren't good I wouldn't be where I am, would I?"

Her eyes were so honestly questioning, so confident, and she looked so young with her face scrubbed and her hair tied back with a hair ribbon, that Fran couldn't tell the truth. She said, "Well, this is one night when I'll think about it and pop you into bed by nine o'clock. Helfier will be here at eight and you're rehearsing at noon."

From the darkened bedroom, Kit called to Fran, "Don't you think it's funny we don't hear from Vance? He was supposed to get back last night, or this morning.

Fran was already lost in a detective story in her favorite magazine. She grunted, "Huh?"

"He must be back. I know he has a show to do tonight at eleven."

Fran looked up from her page. "He could be doing a duet with Flagstad and I wouldn't hear it. I'm going to bed as soon as I find out who killed the last six people. It was either the baby or the great grandmother."

"But we haven't heard from him since Sunday."

"Oh, go to sleep, will you, Kit? Don't you suppose he's got something to do besides call us up and hang around here?"

"You mean—he—he might have a girl—or something?"

"Well, there's no law against it, is there?" Fran retorted as she closed the bedroom door with finality.

Of course he could have a girl. Anyone he wanted. But there hadn't been anyone he wanted. Time after time she'd seen him with girls, heard that he was seen here or there with a movie star or a Broadway actress or another girl in radio. But it had never been the same girl more than two or three times.

"Vance plays the field," Nana had said. "Maybe he's afraid of getting roped into marriage and he's a born bachelor."

The trend of her thoughts was discomforting and it persisted in her fitful, restless sleep.

The day broke hot and humid under an overcast sky.

Kit, struggling with a passage that did not satisfy the usually easy-going Helfier, felt unbearably sticky and listless. Her voice was husky, with no sweetness in it.

Helfier left at noon, after a stormy session. Kit paced up and down the floor of her living room until Fran said, "I'll get you a cage and you can growl, too."

Kit flung herself into a deep chair. "I simply can't rehearse today," she groaned.

Fran calmly handed her her hat and pocketbook. "Here's your hat. What's your hurry, as we used to say. Come on, let's go."

Kit put her hat on without looking in the mirror. "I'll go alone. You don't need to come out in this heat. I'd rather you'd stay here anyway. Va—someone important might telephone."

The rehearsal was late getting started. There had been a mix-up in schedules and the large company had to rehearse in a small, airless studio. The director, always difficult to work with, clashed with the guest star over some of his arrangements. Kit missed two cues in succession. The rehearsal, which should have been over at four, was not done until six.

She was about to step into the elevator when a hand at her elbow detained her. She turned and saw that it was Larry Widmer saying, "Will you hold it a minute, Miss O'Reilly?"

She said, "Sure, Larry, but please make it quick."

THE I. E. S. TAG

In a less impressive but none the less sincere way, the I. E. S. Tag is a symbol of integrity and quality. Any lamp carrying this tag is guaranteed to provide eye-protecting light and sturdy, long-lived construction for it has been built in accordance with the 54 specifications established by the Illuminating Engineering Society, a non-profit, non-commercial organization devoted to lighting research.

I. E. S. MODELS FOR EVERY PURPOSE

When I. E. S. Lamps were first introduced several years ago, they were business-like lamps intended for use in connection with home seeing tasks. Today the lighting and construction principles embodied in those lamps have been applied to all types of lamps until the variety and selection is so great that you can obtain an I. E. S. SCENE FROM "ARISE MY LOVE"

THEATERS ..... With a world going mad about them, Claudette Colbert and Ray Milland find happiness in a stolen vacation in the Forest of Compiegne. It's a scene from "Arise, My Love," the Paramount picture coming Saturday to the Strand theater, describing their dramatic romance with modern-day Europe as a background.

MISS LANGFORD LEADS THE LILTING!

Under milk-rationing regulations in Finland, babies receive a quart of milk each day but adults only one-fourth quart.

Claudette Plays Part Of Newspaper Girl

Weaving romance and laughter, out of the headlines of today "Arise, My Love" carries Claudette Colbert and Ray Milland to the screen of the Strand theater on the crest of the season's romantic comedy. Opening date of the picture has been set for tomorrow.

With a hard-hitting newspaper girl for its heroine, a handsome flying fool for its hero, "Arise, My Love" takes up the thread of drama in Spain where Claudette snatches Milland from a firing squad death.

She is assigned to Berlin as a reward for her scoop, but Milland forces her to join him in a stolen vacation. When war is declared they attempt to sail for America, but a submarine and shipwreck send them back to Europe to join the fight for democracy.

How their love is molded in the crisis of nations at war is shown in the sequences that lead up to the climax of "Arise, My Love."

Tyrone Power in "The Mark of Zorro" shows today for the last times.

An added feature is the Spokane bridge collapse. This great structure breaks up before the eyes of the news camera.

Musical Comedy Is Coming to the Liberty

The big filmusical has again come into its own!

"Too Many Girls", starting tomorrow at the New Liberty, is significant of the new trend, showing what successful New York stage producer can do when he turns his talent to producing and directing a motion picture from his own stage hit. "Too Many Girls" was produced and directed by George Abbott who produced the original play on Broadway last season, where it ran eight months, highly acclaimed by critics and public.

Moreover this picture leads the big parade of musical pictures, being the first of the new cycle to be produced, and the first to be released.

Filled with comedy, fast action, beautiful girls and tuneful songs all presented in the best Abbott manner, "Too Many Girls" is something decidedly new in entertainment.

With him from New York Abbott brought Desi Arnaz, the Cuban conga king. Hal LeRoy, Eddie Bracken and numerous minor players from the original cast of "Too Many Girls." In Hollywood he signed Richard Carlson and Lucille Ball to play the leading roles, Ann Miller, whirlwind tap-dancer of last season's George White's "Scandals," Frances Langford renowned radio singer and others, to build up what virtually amounts to an all-star cast.

Karloff Plays Horror Role in Garden Film

Boris Karloff, horror king of Hollywood, comes to the screen of the Garden theater in his most terrifying role in Columbia's "The Man With Nine Lives," which opens today. Roger Pryor, Jo Ann Sayers and Stanley Brown are featured in the weird drama which tells of a scientist who is restored to life after having been in a state of suspended animation for ten years. Karloff portrays the scientist who, upon his restoration, embarks on a series of experiments with ruthless diregard for human life.

"Go West, young man," was good advice for John Mack Brown.

The cowboy star, a native of Alabama, went West twice: the first time to win the national fotball championship for his alma mater, University of Alabama, and the second time to win stardom on the screen.

In his latest starring role in Universal's "Son of Roaring Dan," which comes today to the Garden theater, Brown "goes West" again in his portrayal of a tenderfoot.

More than $68,000,000 was put into circulation in thirty-eight states through travel to United States national parks during 1940. This sum is based on the very low estimate of $4.08 expenditure by each visitor. Purchases included gasoline, oil, tires, groceries, and lodgings, and "souvenirs."

Panelled Style for Home Days

Marian Martin
PATTERN 9563

There's a sure recipe for at-home charm in this vivacious cotton frock. For Marian Martin has used a mixture of smart style, good lines and tasteful details in Pattern 9563—with very satisfying results!

You'll find it wonderfully easy to make, too, with the Sew Chart's able help. That long front panel is a slenderizing feature; so is the back skirt panel. Gathers through the side bodice sections release nice softness; well-shaped waist seams at either side of the panel give a slim-and-trim waistline, aided by a back-tying sash. The yoke copycats the shape of the neckline in a most becoming effect. Play it up in contrast, if you like—eyelet batiste would be gay—perhaps with matching cuffs on the short sleeved style.

Pattern 9563 may be ordered only in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards 35 inch fabric and 1½ yards ric-rac.

Send fifteen cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address and style number.

Holiday time means time for new clothes which is just another way of saying you need the Marian Martin pattern book! Follow the style-lead of this brilliant book, and find easy-to-make modes for the whole family—on a budget plan. There are lovely frocks for day and evening merrymaking . . . dresses and aprons for busy indoor days . . . party, sports and new-term school styles. Order a copy now! Book fifteen cents. Pattern fifteen cents. Book and Pattern together, twenty-five cents.

Send your order to Cumberland News, Pattern Department, 232 W. 18th St. New York, N. Y.

National Commander Of Legion To Speak

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 14 (AP)—Milo J. Warner, national commander of the American Legion, will make his official visit to the West Virginia Department on December 6, Department Adjutant G. Stanley Hamric announced today.

Warner, a resident of Toledo, O., will speak at a banquet that evening open to all West Virginia members of the Legion and its affiliated organizations.

Hamric said Governor Homer A. Holt and Mayor D. Bone Dawson of Charleston will be invited to participate.

Many Legion posts in the state, particularly those near Charleston, will send delegations, Hamric added.

Five Year Sentence Is Given McDaniel

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 14 (AP)—Conrad McDaniel, 19-year-old farmer, was convicted of voluntary manslaughter last night for the fatal shooting of Allen Hess, 30, a neighbor, on August 21.

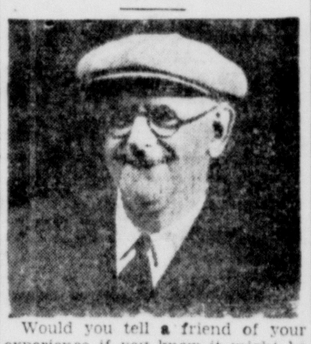

The shooting followed an argument over possession of a mule belonging to the McDaniel family.

Judge Decatur H. Rodgers said the verdict made a five-year sentence mandatory.

Hess' widow said she saw the fight and that McDaniel had possession of a pistol. Witnesses for McDaniel claimed it was in Hess's hands.

SUFFERED SHARP RHEUMATIC PAINS IN SHOULDER—FINDS RELIEF!

Retired Maryland Farmer Suffered Broken Sleep—Nervous From The Aching Pains — Then Find Relief With "RUX"

Would you tell a friend of your experience if you knew it might be of much help to him? Of course you would, and that is why Mr. J. P. Cartes, Frederick, Maryland, is telling his friends and neighbors about the splendid relief he has experienced. By using RUX Compound Mr. Cartes says,

"It is really a help to find a medicine that brings you the relief you want. I know, because I was suffering from Rheumatic-like pains in my shoulders and arms and they would even pain me in my hands at times. You know how uncomfortable I was trying to rest and sleep at night with these nagging pains. I saw RUX Compound at my druggist's one day and decided it might be what I wanted. I am glad I did get RUX for it wasn't long before I could feel some relief and as I have continued I have found these pains considerably eased. I can sleep so much better and feel so much more rested and comfortable throughout the day. RUX has my praise because it deserves it."

NOW IS YOUR CHANCE TO TRY RUX COMPOUND

Knowing what RUX pain relief has meant to so many others, you too have the same opportunity to try this medicine for right here the Ford Drug Stores carries 3 economical sizes for your convenience. Come in today and say, "I Want Some RUX Compound!" and get started taking RUX for yourself. Get the Genuine Medicine, (liquid) Stubbornly refuse all substitutes.

"The Authority on Authorities"

REFUSE TO BE LICKED

HAVE YOU ever counted up the number of winners and losers in your own hand and the dummy, and found no apparent way to avoid being set a trick? If that is the case, you have a choice of two alternatives. You may go ahead and play the hand according to what seems to be the natural way, and take your licking. Or you may study a bit more to see if there isn't some way to prevent a loser or two, perhaps by some sort of coup, squeeze or lead-throwing end-play. A great percentage of all these plays are made by declarers who seemed to be licked, but refused to be.

6 ♦	Dbl	Rdble

North and South had a part score of 40, so that 3-Diamonds constituted a game bid. North's 4-Diamonds was therefore a mild slam try. South accepted the invitation by using the Blackwood convention, and when his partner's response showed two aces, he was ready for small slam. His enthusiasm fell when he saw the dummy, upon West's lead of the heart K. There were apparently two losers to be disposed of in that suit, and no way to dispose of them.

A bit of study showed South a method. After taking the first trick with dummy's heart A, he led the spade Q, covered by the K and A, settled the trumps with two rounds, and realized that East was almost surely out of red cards, since West figured to have a five-card heart suit. If this was so he could make his contract, by stripping his two hands of black cards.

So he played to the club A, ruffed the spade 3, ruffed the club J in dummy, then led the spade 4, discarding the heart 5. East, of course, had to win the spade, and it was his lead. With only black cards, of which South had none, he returned a club. Declarer threw his last heart on it and trumped in the dummy, so that he had no more losers and made his contract.

What is the principal reason why South should not bid 2-No Trumps on this deal, after North's 1-Heart?

Doctor Discusses Various Vitamins And Their Effect on Our Bodies

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I am informed by one of my very learned readers, who occupies a teaching position in a great university, that I should pep up my remarks on the vitamins. To quote exactly, this authority says, "Nutrition is a living subject, and should be treated that way."

I acknowledge the justice of the criticism and I apologize to the vitamins for my too genteel treatment of them. But letters from my readers tell me that they are confused about the vitamins, and that the flippant discourses of the domestic scientists have mixed them up. So I am going to disregard my learned friend's advice and present a straightforward review of the vitamins in this and the next few articles, under the following headings:

1. The numeration of the vitamins. They have been multiplying so fast that even the best doctors can hardly keep up with what is Vitamin P and Vitamin V. In this numeration I will try to tell first what the average person wants to know—what a specific vitamin does in the body, then what its chemical structure is, and then some practical questions as whether it is destroyed by cooking or refrigeration.

2. The diseases of bodily conditions that result from lack in the diet of one or the other vitamins.

3. What signs on the body show vitamin deficiency.

The vitamins which have been described to date are A; B1, B2, B3, B4, B5, B6; C; D; E; K; P; U; W; V. The nomenclature isn't at all logical. Why should there be a break in continuity between E and K? The answer is that custom decreed that the vitamins should be named alphabetically and the latter workers feared that someone else would monopolize the low letters of the alphabet so they appropriated them first.

History Lesson

A was, as might be suspected, the first to be discovered. It is found in fatty food and is fat soluble. So is Vitamin D and these are often found together. Vitamin D prevents rickets; it was at first supposed that Vitamin A prevented rickets. But it was afterwards shown that A is quite different and separate from D. Life could not be sustained if Vitamin A were not in the diet—it carries on growth, prevents infections and superintends things generally. It has a good deal to do with the nutrition of the eye. If the retina does not get enough Vitamin A, night blindness occurs. This is not very serious, but when it occurs it indicates that the diet does not contain enough vitamins generally. And the test for night blindness can very easily be made; special machines are used.

Vitamin A has been used as a medicine, or rather, a dressing for burns and many skin diseases.

Questions and Answers

A. V.—"Can you enlighten me on dementia praecox? Is there a cure for this mental disorder?"

Answer—Dementia praecox is a form of mental depression which occurs mostly in young people. It is not heredity and does not run in families as many forms of mental disorders do. It seems to be a process of withdrawing into oneself and losing interest in the rest of the world. The causes are very complicated and can only be unraveled with a full analysis of the individual's life history. Many methods of treatment are tried. Often in the course of time the patients get better. The so-called shock therapy with metrazol, by producing profound disturbance amounting to a convulsion, has been successful in many cases when carried out by competent physicians.

Horrors of War-- No More Caviar

LOS Angeles (AP) — All the wealth of the movie colony and real estate kings no longer can bring choice fresh caviar to Los Angeles dinner tables. Dealers report that refrigerator ships have been withdrawn from the battle zone, and there is simply none being imported.

The best caviar, which was from the Beluga sturgeon caught near the mouth of the Volga, commanded a wholesale price of $25 a pound. There is a little salted caviar left, selling at $9 a pound.

Marching Along Together--

DALHART, Tex., (AP) — Joe and Jack McClendon, 22-year-old twins, of Dalhart, registered separately for the draft in two Texas towns.

After the cards were assembled at the county seat, shuffled and numbered, Joe was assigned 721 and Jack 728.

In the national draft lottery at Washington Jack Drew No. 3025 and Joe, 3028, but when the figures were consolidated again in the county Jack got 146 while Joe was right behind him with 147.

Yes He Was Interested

PUEBLO, Colo., (AP) — The election campaign was at its peak. Pueblo candidates had their workers out in full force.

"Can I interest you in my candidate?" politely inquired one of the vote solicitors of a woman voter.

LaSalle-Ridgeley Game Is On Tap Tonight

LaSalle Rules Slight Favorite In Grid Tussle

Ridgeley Rampagers Have Improved Since Early Loss to Allegany

The gridiron tussle between LaSalle high and Ridgeley, tonight at the Fort Hill stadium, at 8 o'clock shapes up as one of those even-Stephen contests and the football faithful are looking for an action-packed evening.

Coach Bill Hahn's Ridgeley Rampagers have been playing some very good ball lately, while LaSalle is riding high after its 6-3 win over Allegany two weeks ago.

An inspection of all available dope indicates LaSalle, as the probable winner by a touchdown. On the other hand if Ridgeley should get its aerial game working with accuracy, they would stand an excellent chance to subdue the Irish from North Centre street.

The boys from across the Blue Ridge have demonstrated on several occasions that a few well-placed tosses can win any game. The West Virginians have three backfield men available for a passing attack in Lookabaugh, Zimmerman and Washabaugh. Any one of this trio can and have thrown long passes for touchdowns this season.

In the case of LaSalle it is evident they will rely on their tricky and diversified running attack to place them in the winner's column. In the event their running plays are stymied, an air attack would be no unusual method of scoring for them as they have used the upstairs on many occasions to get to pay-dirt.

In case the weather is unfavorable the game may be postponed until the next day. The time and place will be announced if such is the case. Neither Fort Hill or Allegany play this week.

Probable lineups for tonight's game:

Pos.	LaSALLE	RIDGELEY
LE	McGraw	Carr
LT	Klosterman	Kinsman
LG	Brooks	Titchnell
C	Grabenstein	Thomas
RG	R. Palmer	Carder
RT	D. Palmer	Lindsey
RE	Small	Hartman
QB	Shaffer	Robinson
LH	Malloy	Zimmerman
RH	Smith	Washabaugh
FB	V. Cavanaugh	Lookabaugh

Officials—Cavanaugh, Henry and Grimm. Time of game—8 p. m. Place—Fort Hill stadium.

The Registereds' 3-0 victory over the Kellys combined with the Kant Slips' 2-1 upset win over the Aircores sent the Registereds into first place this week in the Kelly-Springfield League race being staged at the Club. The Aircores dropped to a tie for second with the Camel Backs, who swept over the Buckeyes 3-0. The Commercials bested the Sure Stops 2-1 in the fourth match.

One individual record and a team mark were shattered. Howard "Shorty" Radcliffe of the Registereds smashed the set record of 520 held by Trail of the Kellys with 539 and the Registereds had a 2,580 set, three pins over the previous high of 2,577 rolled by the Buckeyes.

Yale Seen As Winner Over Princeton Team

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

New York, Nov. 14.—Imagine the feelings of this poet when a certain critic, writing his slanderous drivel in the Izhevsk (Russia) Daily Pine-Cone, spoke as follows:

"While the poet Lardner is famous all over America for the beauty of his lyrics and the matchless cadence of his rhythms, he knows about nothing except football, and is otherwise a dolt, lunkhead, ignoramus, boor, clod, illiterate clown, and mental cipher."

I cannot let a challenge like that pass unanswered. Little does the critic of the Daily Pine-Cone suspect that I have at my finger tips something like 14,567 different facts, all of great importance and having nothing to do with football.

The public is welcome to any of these facts, at no extra charge. Just to show the scurrilous traducer of Izhevsk what I mean, and to humiliate him in front of his readers, I will attach a nugget of information, a golden kernel of general knowledge, to each and every football prediction this week.

Don't thank me. I'm glad to do it. The winners:

Yale will triumph over Princeton
Ere the shade of evening falls.
(Charles Blondin, a tightrope expert, Walked across Niagara Falls.)

Texas A. and M. will win, and
Rice, I grieve to say, will lose.
(Eskimos construct their summer Dwellings out of Caribous.)

Southern Cal will catch it proper
From the U. of Washington.
(Karl Friederich August Gutzlaff Died in 1851.)

Old Purdue will take a licking;
Minnesota, cannot fail.
(Folks, the common Phoebe's wings are Slightly longer than its tail.)

Oklahoma's Sooners have an Edge upon the U. of Mo.
(Voluntary hara-kiri
Is no longer Comme Il Faut.)

Iowa will find the Irish
Just a bit too tough to stop.
(Did you know that Ifni is a Town of 20,000 pop.?)

Colgate is the team that loses,
Syracuse the club that wins.
(Perch have slender, graceful bodies,
Flanked by somewhat spiny fins.)

Brown will realize that Harvard's Getting tough and still more tough.
(Crows are distantly related
To a species called the Chough.)

Boston College will disrupt
Georgetown's victory parade.
(Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy Cleaned up in the China trade.)

Let Northwestern do her best.
(Mithridates, on the level,
Died upon his own request.)

Dartmouth's team will take a whacking
From that big, red, rough Cornell.
(I ain't kidding when I tell you Sepents have no sense of smell.)

Duke will wallop Carolina
To the best of its ability.
(Tantalum, the hard, metallic Cehmical, has great ductility.)

Penn has got a little too much
Stuff for Army, what I mean.
(When you see an Ignis Fatuus,
Then you know it's hallowe'en.)

Ohio State is not so hot, but
Illinois is somewhat worse.
(Boys, let me introduce Po Chui;
He wrote a million lines of verse.)

Columbia's too smart for Navy,
No use of saying that she ain't.
(If someone asks about Rafaello,
Just tell 'em that the kid could paint.)

While as for Stanford, Leland
Stanford,
She'll clean up on Oregon State.
(The blue-eyed fish-hawk whistles "Margie"
By way of summoning its mate.)

Large Crowd Expected To See Ky.-W.V.U. Play

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 14—With an excellent advance sale, prospects are for a homecoming crowd of between 10,000 and 12,000 for the Kentucky-West Virginia game here Saturday.

While they are not to be admitted free for this game, a number of high school coaches have notified Director of Athletics Roy M. Hawley about seat reservations for their entire squads. One of them is Carl Hamill, who will bring his crack Weirton squad here for the game.

There will be a number of guests, such as persons here for the State Journalism Conference, the State Safety Meet, and the Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors meeting.

One of the largest pre-game rallies in years will be held Friday night in Mountaineer Field House, with both Coach Ab Kirwan of Kentucky and Bill Kern of West Virginia scheduled to speak. The rally will culminate in the traditional thuse parade through the city's downtown streets.

Arrangements are complete for another long homecoming parade shortly before the game Saturday, winding up at Mountaineer Stadium for the opening kick-off at 2 p. m.

Whirlaway Cops Walden Stakes At Pimlico

BALTIMORE, Nov. 14 (AP)—Whirlaway, beaten favorite in the rich Pimlico Futurity, came back with a winning effort today and beat seven other two-year-olds in the thirty-fourth running of the $7,500 added Walden Stakes over a muddy track at Pimlico.

The Calumet Farm's colt, carrying top weight of 122 pounds and ridden by Jockey George Woolf, raced to a four-length victory over Mrs. E. G. Lewis' Magnificent. M. E. Ryan's Stimady was third, another two lengths back.

Rain and mud apparently didn't bother Whirlaway a bit, although the heavy track held his time for the mile and a sixteenth to 1:52 1-5. The favorite, he added $5.00 for $2 while picking up a purse of $8,140.

All Seats Sold For Washington-Chicago Contest

Fans Who Do Not Have Tickets Are Advised To Stay at Home

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 14—The Washington Redskins management advises all out-of-town fans not to make the trip to the Capitol City for the Chicago Bears game this Sunday (November 17) unless they already have tickets.

The supply of tickets has been exhausted for more than a week and no standing room or general admission tickets will be sold on the day of the game.

Meanwhile, the Redskins, getting over their first defeat of the season with a minimum of injuries, are preparing for the invasion of the Big Bad Bears from the Windy City. Both the Redskins and Bears were defeated in theilr game on Sunday, the Washington team losing to the Brooklyn Dodgers by a 16 to 14 count, while the Bears were edged out 17 to 14 by Detroit. This should make both teams fit and ready for both will me striving to put the clincher on their title hopes. The Bears are leading the parade in the western division with six wins and two losses, while the Redskins are setting the pace in the east with seven victories and one defeat. The Bears are one full game ahead of Green Bay, and the Redskins are two full games ahead of Brooklyn.

Tickets are now on sale for the Redskins final home game of the season with the Philadelphia Eagles, Demember 1. Always a hard bird to bring down, Philadelphia will present an array of stars in Davey O'Brien and Don Looney, the passing twins from Texas Christian. Penn State's President Is Dubious on Wins

"Nothing So Impairs Spirit of Sportsmanship as Habitual Victory" He Says

By WICK TEMPLE

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 14 (AP) — Onward rolls Penn State's grid powerhouse but scholarly President Ralph Dorn Hetzel frankly hopes it won't go too far.

Although an ardent Nittany Lion rooter, middle-aged Dr. Hetzel told the team last December as it rejoiced over a season marked by a single defeat:

"Nothing so impairs the spirit of good sportsmanship as habitual victory."

State hasn't tasted defeat since bowling over Bucknell, Temple, West Virginia, South Carolina and Lehigh, and battling Syracuse to a 13-13 deadlock.

Today Dr. Hertzel observed:

"I think college football represents a fairly competitive force and it doesn't seem to me that institutions and universities about the same size and with the same resources ordinarily expect to win year after year.

"Institutions that continue over a long period of time have constantly winning teams build up a situation that makes it difficult for them to maintain academic standards that ought to prevail. These institutions are educational and the educational program should be the one to dominate the situation."

While Coach Bob Higgins enjoys his best year in the 11 he has tutored the Lions, the alumni anxiously talks of an undefeated season and possibly a bowl bid. Higgins shudders at every mention of such words.

Still to face the Lions are New York University and Pitt. State hasn't won in Pittsburgh's stadium since 1919 when Higgins as an All-America end took a pass from behind his own goal and raced for the winning counter.

The only Lion defeat in the last 14 games was at the hands of Cornell in mid-season 1939.

Writer Is Named General Manager of Cubs

James Gallagher Will Fill Newly Created Position

Chicago Herald-American Writer Often Critical of Wrigley Team

By EARL HILLIGAN

CHICAGO, Nov. 14 (AP) — The Chicago Cubs, continuing a "rearrangement" of executive personnel which began with the dismissal of team manager Gabby Hartnett, named a Chicago newspaperman general manager of the club today.

The post, a new one, will be filled by James T. Gallagher, thirty-six year old baseball writer of the Chicago Herald-American, who on many occasions was extremely critical toward the National League team, particularly during the two and one-half years it was under the direction of Hartnett.

Gallagher, a baseball writer who traveled regularly with the Cubs for seven years, said the principal aim of his office would be to "eliminate the confusion which seems to have marked Cub executive matters and to improve the team's relations with the public."

Will Name Manager

"We will definitely name a manager to succeed Hartnett before the minor league meetings early in December," said Gallagher, a native of Lorain, O. "Running the team on the field will be the team manager's job, and his alone. x x x So far as Dizzy Dean is concerned, I favor taking him to camp and determining once and for all whether he can pitch Major League ball."

Meanwhile, the hot-stove-league rumor kettle boiled merrily over the flame of speculation on a successor to Hartnett. The name of Bill Meyer continued to lead the list. Meyer, who is expected to retire as manager of the American Association Kansas City club, said today:

"I'd be glad to take the Cub job if an offer is made. It looks like a very good proposition and it seems to me the team could be built up easily."

Wilson Is Candidate

Jimmie Wilson of the Cincinnati Reds, former Philadelphia Phillies manager who has been mentioned as another possibility, said he would not bid for the post but would "certainly give the matter deep consideration if I were approached."

The Cubs, who have won three pennants in the last decade (19932, 1935 and 1938) as Rogers Hornsby, Charlie Grimm and then Hartnett took their turns at the managerial helm, also announced the resignation of Charles A. Weber as treasurer. He is being succeeded by William L. Veeck, Jr., son of the late Cub president. Weber withdrew his resignation as vice president and will aid Veeck and Gallagher.

President P. K. Wrigley said his job as club president was "still bogged up." He desires to retire, but the man he wanted for the post, Weber, declined the job.

The Sportlight

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

THE MAIN INGREDIENT

They do not know the starry heights of fame,
They've never dreamed of glory, as their due,
But in their simpler way, they play the game,
And give the best they have to see it through.
Not for the laurel, or the olive crest,
But for the love of giving out their best.

They have no thought of grandeur in this world.
No bands that blare with loud, heroic blend.
They only keep their flag of faith unfurled
Above the field of courage to the end.
A barren field that has few lights around
To guide them to a higher, better ground.

Unknown, unsung they look for no reward
Beyond the humbler tasks which they must face,
Unmindful of the ones who win the race.
But in each heart, or deep within each soul,
They still drive on to reach some hidden goal.

Courage is flare and flame—with ebb and flow—
But fortitude is only for the great.
Who know the heights are lost, the lights are low,
Who still will not give way to any fate.
They look on failure as their lines re-form
To stand, heads up, against the next black storm.

The Semi-Finals

We are now moving into the semi-finals of one of the greatest college football seasons written into the records of a seventy-year-old game.

The headline games involved in this stretch scramble are Boston College and Georgetown—Minnesota and Purdue — Stanford and Oregon State—Texas A. and M. and Rice—Northwestern and Michigan, one of tne tops—Washington and U. S. C.

The unbeaten, untied conference teams which wade into action tomorrow include Minnesota, Stanford, Texas A. and M., Tennessee and Cornell. This means the so-called upper crest. Which is something like B. L. T. once called the "so-called human race." Notre Dame, Boston College and Georgetown are not involved in any Conference tangles. They ride on their own. And they know what a saddle is.

From this list Tennessee has the only free ride—Virginia. The roughest parapet is the meeting between Boston College and Georgetown, over 4,000 pounds of unbeaten football flesh.

And it might be remembered that Boston College and Georgetown would be an even bet—or better—against Minnesota, Stanford, Texas A. and M. or Tennessee. At least this is what all the pro scouts think, and they know what it's all about—more than the noncombatants, at least.

Stanford has the next toughest assignment against Oregon State. And Texas A. and M. has no romp against Jess Neely's team at Rice, still unbeaten in the Southwest. Wallace Wade told me last year that Neely, then at Clemson, was one of the best coaches he ever knew. His Rice team is green, but always dangerous.

The Roundup

Boston College - Georgetown at Boston—The top game of the country. Two great teams—big, fast, experienced and ably coached with a total record of more than 30 victories without a defeat—on a par with the best in the country, including Minnesota, Texas A. and M., Stanford and Tennessee. The nod to Boston College. Stronger attack.

Michigan-Northwestern at Ann Arbor—One of the tough games of the day to pick. Both are among the strongest teams in the country. Each has been beaten by Minnesota in a nip-and-tuck contest. This is a game in which weather can play a big part. It might affect the Big Nine Conference championship. I'll call this one a draw.

Yale-Princeton at Princeton — One of football's classics. Here is a game that goes back a long way and has known more color and action than most of the traditional games. I give the edge to Princeton through Allerdice.

Harvard-Brown at Cambridge—As a rule, Harlow's Harvard teams are at their best in November but Brown has been coming at fine speed lately and I think has the edge, so I'll pick Brown.

Texas A. & M.-Rice at College Station—This will be another rugged test for Texas A. & M. Jess Neely has done a magnificent job with Rice just as he did with Clemson a year ago. A hard game but I pick Big John Kimbrough and Texas A. & M.

Stanford-Oregon State at Palo Alto—Another hard test for Stanford against a very fine Oregon State team. This is a game in which anything can happen to the unbeaten team. I'll strain with Stanford.

Columbia-Navy at New York City—One of the most interesting games of the year. Both teams are ably coached. I think, however, Navy has more man power than Columbia can show. I'll pick Navy.

N. Y. U.-Penn State at State College—Mal Stevens has a young green team which is improving rapidly, but unbeaten Penn State is one of the best teams in the country with a fine line and good backs. The answer is Penn State.

Pennsylvania-Army at Philadelphia—A good game in which Pennsylvania has all the advantage in the way of material. Yet a week ago Pennsylvania was not strong enough to beat Harvard which was supposed to be outclassed. I think this time, though, that Pennsylvania has more than Army can offer in rebuttal. Pennsylvania.

Minnesota-Purdue at Minneapolis—One of the final barriers that Minnesota has to hurdle this season to finish an unbeaten campaign. On form Minnesota is at least a touchdown or two touchdowns better than Purdue, but Purdue can shoot the works while Minnesota can't after facing the hardest schedule of the year beyond any argument. Here is a chance for an upset, but I still must strain with Minnesota.

Tennessee-Virginia at Knoxville—Another Tennessee gallop. We might even call it another easy winner in the gallop poll.

Alabama-Georgia Tech at Atlanta—Tech still badly crippled has only an outside chance. Alabama, with a lone defeat, is still one of the best teams in the South. Alabama.

Villanova-Manhattan at New York City—Another game loaded with action. I'll take a chance on Villanova in what should be a scoring spree.

Texas Tech-Wake Forest at Lubbock—A nod to Wake Forest.

Southern Methodist-Arkansas at Dallas—Another game that should be full of action. Southern Methodist should win.

Indiana-Wisconsin at Madison—One of the tough contests of the Big Nine. Both have been beaten and yet both teams have been playing fine football. I'll give the shade to Indiana.

Notre Dame-Iowa at South Bend—Notre Dame has not been as hot as many thought, but the South Bend team is still dangerous with Saggau and Juzwik. Notre Dame should win.

Ohio State-Illinois at Champaign—All Ohio State unless Zuppke pulls off another miracle. I don't think he can against this team.

Cornell-Dartmouth at Hanover—Cornell is too good for any team on its schedule but Dartmouth will put up an even harder battle than Yale did a week ago. The answer is still Cornell.

Colgate-Syracuse at Syracuse — Another traditional battle in which there is little choice. Syracuse has been coming along in a hurry. Just the edge to Colgate.

Washington State-U. C. L. A. at Los Angeles—Just a nod to U. C. L. A. but extremely close.

University of Washington-Southern California at Seattle—Always a big game on the West Coast, but this time th eanswer is Washington.

Mississippi State-Millsaps at State College and Mississippi U.-West Tenn. Tteachers at Oxford—Should be two sure wins for Old Man River.

Missouri-Oklahoma at Norman—One of the best games of the day and one of the hardest to pick. Just about a tossup in spite of Christman, one of the greatest forward passers of his time. The edge to Oklahoma.

Michigan State-Marquette at Milwaukee — Michigan State has edge and should win.

Detroit-Gonzaga at Spokane — Detroit, one of the better teams.

Franklin and Marshall-Carnegie Tech at Lancaster — Franklin and Marshall to win.

Frostburg State Booters after Perfect Season

Win Today Over Slippery Rock Will Produce Coveted Honor

FROSTBURG, Nov. 14 — The Frostburg State College soccer team, which is undefeated in seven states this season, will close its campaign today by kicking it out with the strong Slippery Rock (Pa.) College eleven on the latter's field.

Coach George Carrington5s booters have within their grasp a feat never before accomplished by a Frostburg State outfit—an unbeaten season.

The locals' record this year has been remarkable considering handicaps caused by injuries and illness. In seven games, the Mountaineers have scored 18 goals while limitnig opponents to four. In no contest has the opposition tallied more than one goal.

Regardless of the outcome of the battle, Frostburg is again in a strong position to claim the unofficial state championship. Johns Hopkins, Western Maryland, Blue Ridge, Towson and Salisbury have suffered one or more defeats within the state while the University of Maryland has refused to play any of the teachers' colleges.

For the first time this year, a definite Frostburg starting lineup has been named. Barring injuries in practice this week, the forward line will be composed of Jack Thomas, right wing; Ed Athey, left wing; Hal Conrad, center forward; and Willie Shuff and Jack Junkins, inside forwards.

Fred Sacco and Bill Merriman will take care of the fullback chores. Johnny Meyers, "Peck" Elsentrout and Bill Thomas will handle the halfback duties while John Thomas will guard the goal. Bill Houck, Bill Lamberson and Jake Carrington are reserves likely to see service.

Next Monday, the first basketball drill is scheduled at the local school. Frostburg cagers will open their campaign against Loyola at Baltimore on December 3.

THE PARTING OF THE WAYS

Philip K. Wrigley (right), president of the Chicago Cubs, shakes hands with Gabby Hartnett in Chicago, after announcing that Hartnett's contract as manager of the Cubs would not be renewed when it expires Dec. 31. Gabby has been with the team 19 years, has never worn any other major league club uniform. Wrigley said several names were under consideration for the position as manager in 1941.

The Cases rolled the Barrels 3-0 and the Crowns scored a sweep victory over the Cellars in Queen City Brewing League matches at the Savoy. Wilt whipped out the week's high set of 468 to lead the Bottles to a 2-1 victory over the Labels and the Brewers defeated the Bungs 2-1 in other matches. The scores:

Cornell's Gridders Rank at Top of Heap

Alabama Best Defensive Team while Texas Mines Lead in Punting

By GAIL FOWLER

SEATTLE, Nov. 14 (AP)—Although they slowed up somewhat since last week, Cornell's Big Red Gridders still rank comfortably ahead of the field in American Football Statistical Bureau figures released today.

Cornell dropped from 429 to 409.2 average yards per game as a total offensive unit but is still some 42 yards ahead of its nearest competitor, Texas Tech.

Also, Cornell is the only team among the nation's leaders which has gained more yardage in the air than on the ground. The Cayucans have made 1,189 yards rushing and 1,256 upstairs, for a total of 2,455 yards in six games on 370 plays.

The bureau's report marked the fifth straight week the Cornellians have topped total offensive rankings, and the sixth straight week that they've been the number one passing team.

Alabama retained its leadership as the best total defensive team! Lafayette kept first place as the rushing leader and Texas A. & M. retained line play honors. Utah State is again the best defender against passes and Texas Mines is still the team with the best punting average.

Redskins Have Two Tough Teams Ready for Bears

First Team Is 'Skins and Second Is Slingin' Sammy Baugh

By EDDY GILMORE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP) — The Chicago Bears must face two teams when they meet the Washington Redskins Sunday for what may be the prelude to the world series of professional football.

The Bears play the Redskins—a pretty good team—and also must play Slingin' Sammy Baugh, who is practically a whole team in himself.

Enjoying the greatest year of his professional career, Baugh is rapidly nearing league season records in completions of passes, yards gained on passes and in passing efficiency.

He has thrown the ball 140 times, and his heaves have found a receiver 91 times, which means he's going at a .650 clip. His nearest rival in pass efficiency is Eddie Miller, of the New York Giants, with .492.

Baugh's passes have accounted for 1,208 yards. The league's next challenger in this department is Davey O'Brien, of Philadelphia, with 850 yards.

Eleven of Baugh's passes have been good for touchdowns.

With three more games to play, Baugh is within striking distance of three passing records.

He is but 15 completions away from Parker Hall's record of 106 for a season.

O'Brien holds the record for total yards gained with 1,324, and Sammy is only 116 yards away fro mthis one.

If he keeps up his passing efficiency he should set a new mark in this department.

The former Texas Christian University player, also leads the league in punting with an average of 48 yards from the line of scrimmage.

There's one other thing too—he tops the league in running back intercepted passes.

Most reformers, like a pair of trousers on a windy clothesline, go through a vast deal of vehement motion, but stay in the same place

Facts About Bowie Race Track Which Opens Tomorrow

Minimum Purse $1,200 With Eight Added Money and Five Stakes

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 15—This track, which is operated by the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association, will usher in the final lap of Maryland's 1940 racing season at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow.

The sport, which begins tomorrow, will run thirteen days. The closing program will be staged Saturday, November 30.

General Manager Joseph A. Farrell has boosted the minimum purse from $1,000 to $1,200, making them the richest offered by any Maryland track this year. Eight races carry $1,000 added money, with the five stakes to be programmed carrying $32,500 added money.

Dates, values and distances of the stakes to be run here this month are:

Tomorrow — The $5,000 Thomas Kirby Lynch Memorial, mile and one sixteenth, for all ages.

Thursday, November 21—The $7,500 Endurance Handicap, mile and seventy yards, exclusively for two year olds.

Saturday, November 23—The $5,000 Prince George Autumn Handicap, mile and one sixteenth for all ages.

Wednesday, November 27 — The $5,000 W. P. Bureh Memorial Handicap, six furlongs, for all ages.

Saturday, November 30—The $10,000 Bryan & O'Hara Memorial Handicap, mile and three sixteenths for three years olds and up.

The late James F. O'Hara and Gadsden D. Bryan, assisted by John J. Farrell, Jr., now a peace loving citizen of Govanstown, Md., staged the first meeting here in October, 1914.

The first race was run on October 1. It was won by a maiden named Cardigan. Roscoe Troxler rode the two year old.

The original grandstand was destroyed by fire on June 8, 1927. The present modern steel and concrete grandstand and clubhouse was built on November 14, 1927. It holds approximately 15,000.

The track is a mile oval, with a three quarter mile shute. There is a long homestretch, 1,760 from the turn down to the judge's stand. This is the state's longest homestretch.

The homestretch is 90 feet wide, or four feet more than the Laurel track, which is the state's second widest.

The backstretch is 75 feet wide, the same as that at Havre de Grace, which is the state's widest until this track was built.

All starts will be made from the new Bahr stall gate by James F. Milton, official starter on all major tracks in this state.

All finishes will be recorded by the Jones high speed electrical camera, which will be housed in a special booth atop the grandstand and directly on the finish line.

Wagering will be in charge of J. Donald Hay, who fills a similar role at Charles Town, West Va., which opens December 2. All wagers (excepting the daily double) will be through the American Totalizator.

The daily double wagering will be held on the first and second races. Double windows close at 1:15 p. m.

Coach Hagerty of Hoyas Thinks His Team Will Beat Boston College

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP) — Coach Jack Hagerty, of Georgetown, which meets Boston College, Saturday in one of the country's biggest games, today predicted the Hoyas would win.

One of the frankest coaches in the business, Hagerty never hedges, whether he thinks his club will win or lose.

"I think we'll beat them," he said as his undefeated team boarded the train for Boston, "and if Georgetown gets off on the right foot it may not even be close."

Yankees' Reserve Catcher To Retire

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (AP)—Arndt Jorgens, veteran New York Yankee reserve catcher, today notified President E. Barrow that he was retiring from baseball.

From his Wilmette, Ill., home, the 34-year-old receiver wrote that he was giving up baseball to go into business with his father-in-law. Jorgens, who hasn't caught a game in two years, joined the Yankee organization in 1928 and after being farmed out twice came back to stay, most of the time on the bench, in 1930. Though seeing little action, Jorgens collected full shares from five world championships.

Mountaineers To Open Up against Kentucky Eleven

Kern Is Working Hard To Strengthen Team's Pass Defense

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 14 —Fully aware that the University of Kentucky probably has a better passing attack than that exhibited by Cincinnati, West Virginia's Bill Kern this week set about to strengthen his team's pass defense.

Just how to strengthen the team's defense against passes undoubtedly is proving a puzzling problem for the blond Mountaineer coach. Last week he devoted hour after hour to a defense against Cincinnati passes. Even the day before the game, when the drill ordinarily isn't very long, he worked against Cincinnati serials until dark and then called for the floodlights to be switched on for further pass defense preparation.

All the work went for naught, however, as Cincinnati passed the Mountaineers dizzy Saturday. With two mite halfbacks on the tossing end, Davis and Dixon, the Bearcats completed ten out of sixteen attempts for 158 yards. The chances are they would have scored a couple more touchdowns had it not been for unfortunate slip-ups down within the ten-yard line.

While stressing pass defense, Kern has worked considerably on some new plays to shoot against the overwhelmingly favored Wildcats. The chances are that the Mountaineers will gamble on a wide open offense for this game, inasmuch as they don't have the man-power to cope with the Kentuckians.

There will be no change in the starting lineup. Bob Mellaco, who will likely captain the team for this game, and John Shonk will hold down the ends, Walt Pike and Hank Goodman the tackles, John Rockis and Joe Butta the guards, Sam Mandich at center, and Charley Seabright, Don McCann, Glennis Ellis, and Johnny Carliss in the backfield.

Starting time for the game will be 2 p. m., with a homecoming crowd of between 10,000 and 12,000 in prospect.

United States Must Be Made Safe from Dangers Abroad, Major Eliot Says

Risk of Sitting Still Now Is Far Greater Than That of Helping British in Europe and Chinese in China, Military Expert Tells Forum Audience Here

The upset of the balance of power on the European continent signalized by the Nazi conquest of France marked the turning point in the attitude of the United States in regard to the gradual rise of revolutionary movements throughout the world today.

This was the text of the forum address of Major George Fielding Eliot last night at the Allegany high school auditorium who told his audience that such phrases as "neutrality," and "acts of war" have no meaning anymore.

These meaningless phrases, Major Eliot said, belong to an era that is dead and gone.

Must Protect America

"Today, we must do such things as are necessary for the safety of the United States regardless of what they might have been called by the international lawyers," he said.

What must we do? Well, the crux of Major Eliot's dispassionate address was that this country cannot afford to allow Nazi Europe to develop into a great sea power.

This means that this country "cannot let the British Empire go down," he said.

"This is cold, hard fact," the speaker said, "not sentimental reasoning such as hands across the table to Westminster Abbey or kinship of the British through language and ideals."

In other words, the speaker suggests that the risk of sitting still now is far greater than the risk of helping the British in Europe and the Chinese in China "while there are still people in the field to fight."

Twin Menace Discussed

The risk of sitting still, he pointed out, will probably result in this nation eventually facing the twin menace of a German-controlled Europe and a Japanese-controlled Far East.

"We live in a world in which the greatest risk is to sit quietly still and await the conqueror's yoke," Major Eliot said.

"We have seen what happens to those countries that follow the policy of inaction," he added grimly.

The situation as far as the United States is concerned changed in the short space of six weeks while Germany was whipping France, Major Eliot said. While Europe was divided into two camps, which has always been the case in the history of this country, we "were sitting very pretty indeed," he said.

After this event, something that few thought could ever happen, "we began to think in terms of our own safety," Major Eliot said.

Points to British Stupidity

The stupidity of the British in their pre-war groping was not condoned by the speaker who declared that "for fatuous blindness it would be hard to parallel them—unless you want to examine our own record on such matters."

The speaker then bluntly stated that "this thing going on in Europe, if not checked, is capable of almost indefinite expansion."

Major Eliot divided the conflict into three zones, namely, the conflict centered in the British Isles, channel and German Europe; the Mediterranean and the Far East.

Nazis Have Co-ordination

Referring to German successes in Europe, the speaker said that the secret of the Nazi power has been the successful co-ordination of land and air force. But land-air power has its limits, he said, since it can't swim.

Land-air power can win a short war regardless of what sea power does, the speaker said. The reason for this is that sea power does not attack directly, relying rather on the cutting of maritime lines and the blockade. This is effective but it takes a long time, he said.

Germany expected to have its maritime line cut the moment the war started, he said. But Germany, following Napoleon's pattern, planned to carry the conflict to the bases of the enemy with such force that a quick victory would be realized. The plan has failed so far in England's case.

The present situation of Germany is that she can't win air superiority over England. England cannot win air superiority over Germany.

Meanwhile, the importance of sea power is very important in a modern war, the speaker said. This is due to the fact that a modern war machine requires so many different things. Any country to wage war successfully today must be an industrial country. And all industrial countries have a vast amount of foreign trade, he said.

Today, the British have some trade but the Germans don't have any except what trade she can command on the continent itself. Germany, he said, is feeling the pinch economically and in reply to the British blockade is doing two things, trying to gain access to the oil fields of the far east, and counter blockade the British.

This counter blockade was characterized as a real menace by the speaker who recalled that the German U-boat campaign in the World war all but turned the course of the war. Today, Germany has as many submarines as she had during the World war and a far larger number of bases, he said.

Final threat to the British blockade and shipping is the surface raider, he said.

Turning to the Mediterranean Major Eliot said the picture was

Waterfowl Flock To Deep Creek in Record Numbers

Oakland Duck Stamp Supply Is Exhausted; Killing of Swan Illegal

An influx of hundreds of wild geese, ducks and swan yesterday on Deep Creek lake, in Garrett county, brought a warning from Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, that all hunters shooting waterfowl must have a duck stamp in their possession.

Minke also sounded a warning to hunters that it is a violation of a Federal law to shoot a swan and that the penalty is $10 to $100 fine for those convicted of breaking the law. Those arrested will be held for the action of the federal court, Minke added.

Illegal to Kill Swans

The regional game warden called attention to the fact that a stiff penalty is connected with the killing of wild swan after Elmer Hollenbeck, warden at Deep Creek Lake; George Shields, of Mt. Lake Park, district game warden and Lloyd F. Cook, assistant district warden, had notified him that approximately ten wild swans had been found in a crippled condition floating on the lake last evening.

Minke said the wild waterfowl probably had arrived at Deep Creek from the Great Lakes, having taken shelter in Garrett county from the rain and snowstorms that have prevailed in the middle west and have worked their way eastward in the past few days.

Wild swans are larger and heavier birds than ducks and geese and are protected by the United States government, hence the penalty for killing any of the species.

Just how long the waterfowl will remain at Deep Creek is not known but Minke indicated that he was of the opinion that they will migrate to the warm southern climes after the weather clears.

Wardens in the Deep Creek area told Minke last evening that several hundred ducks and geese were bagged yesterday by hunters and the sport is expected to continue for several days.

Stamp Supply Exhausted

The demand was so great for duck stamps yesterday that the supply at the Oakland post office became exhausted. The stamps may be purchased at any post office, including third and fourth class, and cost $1 each.

Waterfowl are reported to be more abundant this year than they have been for the past eight years, according to a national survey, Minke states.

Employes at Lakes Gordon and Koon To Get Two Thanksgivings

Charles J. Bruce, waterworks superintendent for the City of Cumberland announced yesterday that the Evitts Creek Water Company will observe two Thanksgiving days this year, one November 21 and the other a week later, November 28.

The Evitts Creek company is a Pennsylvania corporation but is owned solely by the City of Cumberland. Some employes of the company live in Maryland and others reside in Pennsylvania.

Observance of two days is made necessary because Maryland will celebrate Thanksgiving November 21 (the date proclaimed by President Roosevelt and Governor O'Conor) but Pennsylvania will observe the traditional Thanksgiving day which will be November 28.

It's a break for the employes of Lake Gordon and Lake Koon dams, source of Cumberland's water supply, but Mr. Bruce says he will have to stick around the plant both days. However, as he will eat turkey twice in eight days he doesn't mind.

88 Turkeys Are Reported Bagged by Local Hunters

Eighty-eight wild turkeys have been killed in Allegany county since the upland game season was inaugurated November 1, Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, announced yesterday.

Bruce D. Smith, of Lindnerville, and "Herky" Northcraft, of Leper street, reported to Minke yesterday that they had bagged turkeys while hunting in the Green Ridge section.

Rawlings Farmers Go To Court over Property Rights

Another Round in Legal Battle Starts in Circuit Court

Another round in the legal feud between two Rawlings neighbors over boundry lines and water rights started in circuit court yesterday.

The case is a resumption of the disagreement between Charles L. Hansel and William L. Collins, the two farmers who live on adjacent properties.

The case first came before the attention of the public in a contest over the ownership of a granary located on the line separating the properties. The case was dismissed.

Hansel then brought an ejectment action in law and as a result a resurvey was ordered with both participants agreeing on the surveyor. The results of the resurvey are now being presented to the court along with testimony regarding the question.

The law case, of course, is being tried before a jury. However, an equity case brought by Hansel is pending and will be tried before the court in the near future. This case states that Collins has hooked on to a water line used by the Hansel family for years with the result that the Hansel water supply is being diminished.

As brought out in the petition, the source of the supply is located on what was the Hutson property. This property is now owned by the Collins family.

Charles G. Watson is representing Hansel in this chain of litigation, while Collins is represented by Walter C. Capper.

Honey Makes Good Substitute for Sugar, Miss Maude A. Bean, Says

Miss Maude A. Bean, home demonstration agent, noted yesterday that the time of conserving certain foodstuffs, particularly sugar and flour, "may be just around the corner."

She remarked that the idea will be nothinf new to housewives of the World war days, who utilized foods to the best advantage so as to save provisions for the men in army camps and on the field of battle.

Bakery concerns advertise the fact they use honey in the manufacture of their products. This is done because the use of honey keeps bread and cakes from drying out too rapidly, Miss Bean said.

Honey takes up moisture rapidly and holds it so that fruit cakes, streamed puddings, cookies and candies made with it stay moist for a long time.

The opposite is true when confections and frostings are made with honey. They will remain undesirably soft and sticky and take up more moisture if the air is humid.

While Cumberland was being drenched by continuous rain yesterday afternoon and last night, tri-state sections were "enjoying" their first snowfall of the winter season, according to state police and weather observers.

Snow began falling in Frostburg at 5 p. m. and lasted until 10 p. m. Two inches fell and fog settled to make driving hazardous. The temperature was thirty degrees at 11 p. m.

At Oakland, youngsters dusted off their sleds at noon and went coasting on five inches of snow which began falling at 4 p. m. and was still coming down late last night. The temperature dropped to thirty degrees there.

Also on the "snow list" was Grantsville where six inches fell Wednesday from 4:30 p. m. to midnight. Only two inches remained yesterday. Temperature was reported twenty-eight degrees at 11 p. m.

Wild Ducks Take Refuge on River

Large Flock Reported on Potomac Near Moose Home Last Night

Hunters take notice!

Cumberlanders and Ridgeleyites were given a treat late yesterday when a large flock of ducks broke their flight south and took refuge on the Potomac river near the Moose home, Beall street.

Observers said the flock, numbering several hundred birds, flew over the Celanese plant about 4 p. m. in "perfect formation". The birds apparently became confused in a dense fog and landed on the river for temporary refuge, they added.

Several West Side residents last night reported the flock was still on the river at 10 o'clock and was "kicking up an 'awful fuss' ". The birds are expected to remain here at least until this morning. They will probably leave when the weather clears.

However, snow fell in the tri-state area last night from five to ten o'clock. Continuous rain drenched Cumberland.

Definite Step on Food Stamp Plan Taken by Grocers

Committee Is Named To Work Out Necessary Details of Program

A definite step toward the adoption of the federal food stamp plan for Allegany county was taken at a meeting of a group of county retail grocers in the city hall last night when a committee headed by Albert T. Tomsko, manager of the Community Super Market, was appointed to work out the necessary details.

The committee was appointed after the group had expressed unanimous approval of starting the plan which is now working successfully in 167 cities throughout the country.

Chairman of the various committees were approved as follows:

Economy Service Stores, George Garlitz.

Quality Service Stores, George W. Martin.

Chain Stores, Robert H. Seefeld.

Baking Concerns, J. George Smith.

Wholesale Grocers, F. W. Chapman.

Meat Packers, Bernard E. Burkey.

Dairies, John D. Liebau.

Farmers, Ralph D. McHenry.

Produce Group, Lester Wilkinson.

Frostburg District, Walter Cook.

Westernport District, James E. Kenney.

The Allegany board of county commissioners also was drafted as members of the committee in view of the fact that financial assistance will be required of that body to make the plan work in this county.

The committee will meet in the near future to iron out the details of the plan and to enlarge the committee as is seen fit so that all groups are properly represented.

John D. Liebau, manager of the Queen City Dairy, Inc., and president of the Cumberland Camber of Commerce, acted as chairman of the meeting and Harold W. Smith, secretary of the Cumberland Chamber of Commece, was secretary.

Liebau Leads Discussion

Liebau led the discussion which lasted about two hours and he answered as best he could the many questions asked regarding just how the plan worked.

He explained that if started here, the plan would mean approximately $20,000 worth of additional business to grocers each month. He further stated that county officials must deposit $20,000 with the federal treasury revolving fund. This fund would be sent to the treasury through the welfare board which would receive $20,000 worth of orange and blue stamps in return.

The stamps, to be distributed among certified relief cases, are divided into two categories. For each dollar's worth of orange stamps, the federal government donates fifty cents worth of blue stamps. The blue stamps are limited to the purchase of surplus foods only while the orange stamps will be redeemed for any kind of food for human consumption.

The grocer, accepting the stamps as cash, pastes them on a form sheet, turns them over to the wholesaler or banker who in turn sends the stamps to Washington where the treasury department pays the banker or wholesaler in cash.

J. George Smith announced that invitations had been forwarded to approximately 400 retailers to attend last night's meeting but few replies were received and the attendance was small.

However, he endorsed the plan, and said he was certain it would work to the advantage of both retail merchant and the relief client.

Farm Men Speak

R. C. Wilson, president of the Allegany County Farm Bureau; Ralph McHenry, county farm agent, and C. K. Norris, of 13 Decatur street, who said he made an attempt to interest the welfare board in the stamp plan six months ago, also were among the speakers.

Norris told of the wormy flour that had been given out to those on the dole and said under the food stamp plan those on relief would be assured a balanced diet instead of getting food that was unfit to eat.

Those attending the meeting included F. W. Chapman, of the C. D. Kenny Company; John Crosser, Lonaconing; Al Tomsko, of the Community Super Market; R. C. Wilson, of Rawlings; I. C. Saville, 716 Frederick street; R. F. McHenry, county farm agent; J. George Smith, of the Community Baking Company; Moe Sacks, of the Public Service Market; E. D. Larkin, of Bedford street.
